PAPA'S PROPAGANDA POOR

Dad 'Flunks' in Kindergarten

Papa's handy when you need a nickel.

But the average kindergarten inmate has only the vaguest notion of how Dad earns his nickels, a recent experiment shows.

Students in Miss Jacqueline Logan's kindergarten class at Lowell School were given this question:

"What is your father's job?"

The answers prove that what Papa needs is more propaganda about his work. Here are some of the replies. In each case, the actual occupation follows in parentheses.

Cassandra Hill: "He works where my mother's mother does, no. I mean my father's mother. He writes down and finishes the book." (Sales manager.)

Gregory Beck: "He has a train job; he picks up people and engines, too. He is on a bus sometimes, too." (Bus driver.) Brian Blurton: "He makes steel in Los Angeles. He wears clean clothes to work." (Plant manager.)

Mark Towler "lie works for money. He drives a plane. I really don't know what he works for." (Buyer-expediter.) Glenn Harwood: "My dad works for a government. Not a real government, but he calls it a government. He works at Douglas. He guides the planes out and puts up the flags for them." (Auditor.)

Joseph Raia: "He goes on a bus, morning, afternoon and night time, to Vallejo to get on the ship. He used to drive the ship, but now he cleans it." (Navy employe.)

Donnie Smeallie: "He works across the street from the flying red horse gas station. He makes machines and cabinets—shiny ones. But do you know that my mother has a champagne appetite and my daddy has a beer purse?" (Merchant.)

Gail Adams: "He shines blocks, the kind we play with in hool. They have all different kinds of people there." (School Barbara Bowman: "He writes down on paper what he (Civic manager.)

Julie Demicr: "He goes to the office in the club, the Virginia Country Club. He plays golf there I don't know what else." (Lawyer.)

Betty Mae Johnson: "He works on cars in the office at SO THAT'S WHAT DADDY DOES? Douglas." (Auditor.) Maria Kotarinos: "He used to work at Van Nuys and sold

Janica Tweedy: "He lised to work at van Muys and sold seat covers." (Field representative for General Motors.)

Janica Tweedy: "I exactly don't know. He says he works in a great big building, but I don't think he really does." (Property manager.)

Karen Webecke: "He goes to the ocean and takes care of the tuna fish. Everytime we pass by where he works, we roll the windows up—it smells so bad." (School principal.)

Vicki Bayer: "He works on airplanes at Douglas. He comes home at night and goes in the morning. He tells men what to do and uses papers." (Douglas worker.)

Jane Graham: "He works for people who get in accidents. He makes money for them." (Claims adjuster.)

Cost of Parks

Long Beach needs more parks for its growing population. But there is a limit to what the people are willing to pay for additional parks. There is a limit to what is necessary to provide the parks needed by our population. It is doubtful that any two people would agree on just what those limits may be. we would have a very fine park system. The above figures do not include our 300 acres of beach or our 325 acres of school playgrounds.

From the report of the L. A. County Park Superintendent one gets an idea of what it costs to develop and maintain a park. It will be startling to many of our readers. When they realize what it means to their taxes they will be even more concerned. The cost of development runs from $6,000 to $15,000 an acre. The cost of maintenance averages $1,250 an acre per year.

* * * Two years ago, when it appeared we would have an unlimited amount of money, the people voted $3,000,-030 for development of some 163 acres of parks in 11 districts. That averaged $17,100 an acre for development cost alone. If this amount is voted in bonds it will call for additional taxes of about 3 per cent. Then the cost of maintenance added on to present costs would be 163 acres at minimum costs of $1,250 an acre or about $203,-750 α year. That is equal to another 3 per cent increase in annual city taxes. Thus development and maintenance of these 163 acres would add about 6 per cent to city taxes. Greater development of the 1,959 acres now owned by the city would cost proportionately.

At the same time the people voted to use oil money for this development of present park lands they voted another $3,750,000 to acquire more land. That would probably mean another 750 acres. Added to the figures above, taxpayers would face a probable 30 per cent increase in tax rates for this full park program. These projects are being restudied by the Mayor's Committee with α view to submitting α bond issue on α ballot early in

Included in the presently owned land are some 489 acres on the east side of the San Gabriel River. It is land close to the Orange County line. It was acquired when we thought we had unlimited money. Now some thoughtful citizens are suggesting that this land be sold for subdivisions and the proceeds used for developing neighborhood parks throughout the city. The above figures showing land now owned do not include some 430 acres set aside for golf courses of which only about 171 acres cre now developed.

To those who question the cost of maintenance of parks we refer them to the Los Angeles County figures. We also suggest they check what it costs them for a gardener for their own yard. They will find that the cost plus water, fertilizer and new plants will run well above the figures shown per acre. We need more parks. The people should be willing to pay more taxes for more parks. But they should be sure they do not overdo what is a very expensive part of civic services.—L.A.C.

Class of '50 'Old Grads' Hail Changes

Long Beach State College staged its first Homecoming Saturday, with more than 200 alumni turning out for what will become a traditional annual celebration.

Joan Delleney, class of '53. president of the State College Alumni Assn., was chairman of the activities for the young "old grads," the college's first graduating class of 1950.

About half of the 32 graduates from 1950 attended the homecoming program, which included tours of the college's new multimillion-dollar campus, a tea on the lower campus, and a football game with Caltech.

THE CLASS OF 1950, most of whem entered the teaching profession, remarked on the changes wrought since they were graduated. In that year, the college still was in "apartment campus" at Anaheim St. and Pacific Coast Hwy. Not even the temporary campus, now replaced by permanent buildings on a 320-acre site, had been built at that time.

A parade of floats was held at half-time at the game, with top prizes going to Sigma Pi, sweepstakes award, and Delta Zeta, theme award.

Rigid Price Props Urged by Harriman

Democrats kept the farm question alive Saturday night as Gov. Averell Harriman of New York joined Adlai Stevenson in calling for price supports at 90 per cent of parity for basic farm crops.

Harriman, who told an earlier news conference he is not an active candidate for president and expects to serve his full term as governor running through 1958, ripped into Republican farm policies in a speech prepared for a Democratic Midwest farm conference at Des Moines.

He said the farmer now is being treated "like some kind of economic delinquent."

THE REPUBLICAN National Committee said Chairman Leonard W. Hall would issue a "hard-hitting reply" to Harriman and Stevenson in a statement today for Monday newspapers.

Stevenson's support of the 90per-cent-of-parity program, as opposed to the Republican flexibic price-prop program now on the books, was telegraphed to the Des Moines conference Fri day.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson, a leading target of the Democrats as the farm topic builds up to a major issue in the 1956 presidential campaign, said Friday that most of the farmer's postwar adjustment problems are "now behind him." He said the farmer, "has reason to believe farmer "has reason to believe that another 25 million customers will be added to his list in the next 25 years."

HARRIMAN, WHOSE name has been prominently mentioned along with Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee as a candidate for the 1956 Demo-cratic presidential nomination, told a Des Moines news conference he not only expects to com-plete his full term as governor but hopes to be reelected.

LOW PRICE POLICY NOW IN EFFECT SAVES WEARERS MONEY ON DENTAL PLATES

Some time ago Dr. Raymond announced a big savings offer and long-term easy-to-get credit plan of no money down, 21 months to pay.

The response has been ever increasing until now Dr. Raymond announces a continuation of this big offer until further notice.

"I find in this postwar period that people are greatly concerned with prices and value received, especially those in the middle and lower income brackets." Dr. Raymond stated. "Therefore, in order to reach the greater mass of people, I am keeping my prices low and saving plate-wearers money. This is my policy in a nuishell. keep prices down and operate on a large volume." Dr. Raymond further stated, "the cost is so low on dental plates regardless of type or style selected. Your choice of teeth and materials are offered in a selection of gold or steel partials and full upper and lower dentures." The doctor suggested that all those in need of dental plates or removable bridgework or partials of any kind should come in now and see the samples of the newest and latest in teeth and materials.

A special effort is now being made to demonstrate how simple and easy it is to get the terms no money down, as long as 21 months to pay, according to Dr. Raymond.

"I want the public to know that when I say 'you can pay later for your dental plates, on approval of your credit,' I mean exactly that," said Dr. Raymond. "I actually prefer that you pay for your plates in this manner. I have confidence in people's integrity and honosty, especially when they are given their money's worth, and I have confidence in my work. The public has not yet let me down and the popularity and success of my

"Just because your case is difficult, don't be afraid that you will have to pay more than someone eise. My large volume keeps my low prices uniform," Dr. Raymond says. 'P'll pass the savings on to every one of my patients whenever possible."

It is pretty generally known that the larger the volume in any business the less it costs to produce each item. the less it costs to produce each item the same applies to dentistry.

Dr. Raymond points out with pride that about 50 per cent of his patients come to him through the recommendation of other patients.

Last year these days fell on the same day, but this year they were separated because, as we understand it, there was confusion and bad feeling.

We believe we are correct, however, in saying that the confusion and bad feeling and deep concern were felt by relatively few citizens.

Not that they lack interest in the U.S. or the U.N. But most rational, fair-minded persons realize that there is no basic competition between United Nations and United States-that it is possible to be an American and at the same time credit the U. N. with some small measure of accomplishment for the good of mankind.

Few persons by this time hold the illusion that the United Nations has accomplished all the ideals which are so glowingly described in the U. N. Charter. But few, also, would want to destroy it rather than hope that in time it will become a more effective organization.

The United Nations was born in this country. We have been a member of it from its inception. There's absolutely no reason why an American citizen should feel offended by United Nations Day; and no reason why a supporter of the United Nations should not observe United States Day.

MORE NONSENSE

William T. Evjue, non-conformist editor of the Madison, Wis., Capital Times, had his Hing last week at "the stuffed shirts who speak in the name ot American journalism.

Old Bill ridiculed National Newspaper Week as "nothing thore than a hypocritical ges-"ture in dealing with secrecy."

He says that working newspaper reporters in Washington no longer develop the expose type of story because their publishers back home will not print maerial that is deroga-tory of the administration tory of the administration which the owners of the news--papers support.

This is, of course, the usual "liberal line" found in the New Republic and the Democratic

The truth is, as Bill should know, that most Washington correspondents, after years of fat living along the Potomac, are just too damn lazy or dis-interested to do good investigative reporting.

NEWSPRINT HIKE

As predicted some weeks ago by Sir Eric Bowater, chair-man of Bowater Paper Corp., Ltd., the price of newsprint is going up. The astute British-er, who could give most U. S. er, who could give most U.S. tycoons lessons in making money, said that the newsprint industry in the last three years has sustained a 15 per -cent rise in labor costs alone. Sir Eric contends that these costs have been absorbed by newsprint manufacturers, but stated that "we do not intend to pass everything on to the consumer" which was real nice

Before shedding any tears for the Bowater and other en-terprises. I decided to get the facts from the Toronto Finan-cial Counsel. This is what they

"Canada's newsprint industry is enjoying a record year, and if the improvement shown in the first half is projected through the remainder of the year, 1955 earnings will exceed by a wide margin both those of 1954 and 1951."

Speaking of the eight companies listed, the Toronto Financial Counsel says that "aggregate net profits of $65,310,gregate her profits of $05,510,-654 in the first six months of 1955 were almost $11 million, or 19.8 per cent greater than $54,493,966 in the like period in 1954."

A separate report for Bo-water Paper Corp., Ltd., lists a net profit for the year end-ing Dec. 31, 1954, of $13,274,-856 as compared with $8,027,-745 in 1953.

In addition, the Montreal stock exchange average of 10 pulp and paper stocks has advanced an impressive 321 points, or almost 28 per cent to a new high.

This reflects the expectation of continuing high level profits in the paper industry, according to our Toronto authority. CRUDE GOUGE

The new price gouge of $5 a ton is so crude that even Premier Duplessis of Quebec is urging newsprint manufacturers and newspaper publishers ers and newspaper publishers to reach some agreement on prices "because justice and common sense have their rights everywhere."

Rep. Emanuel Cellar (D.-N.Y.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, in describing the increase as "out-scribing the increase as "out-rageous," assailed the iron-clad cartel of Canadian companies which fixes prices by prearrangement.

It is quite obvious from the study of carnings reported by the Canadian companies that another price increase at this time has no economic justification whatsoever.

The higher price will bring further attrition in the newspaper field and jeopardize the existence of many newspapers whose earnings are dangerous-ly near the peril point.

D'AVID LAWRENCE

Browder, Accused of Perjury, Hired as Informant by 'Fund for Republic' tion. Browder denies any relationship to a "Communist conspiracy," which is the language used by Congress in passing the Smith Act.

WASHINGTON - There's. something strange and something strange and mysterious about the case of Earl Browder, Secretary, General of the Communist party in America from 1929 to 1945, who, it is announced, has been hired by "The Fund for the Republic" at a substantial Republic" at a substantial salary per year for part of his time as a "source of information and raw material."

"The Fund for the Republic" is one of the so-called "liberal" organizations, financed by the Ford Foundalion, and one of the cries of protest raised by the "left wing" is that the government uses paid informants or pays ex-Communists as witnesses to testify in trials involving Communist problems. munist problems.

But so far as can be dis-covered here, there is no case on record in which the govern-ment has ever paid money to any person while he himself under indictment

There is pending against Browder a criminal indictment accusing him of perjury. WHY HESITANT?

But the curious aspect of the matter is that if Browder, who claims to have forsaken the Communist party, has done so, why should he hesitate to furnish all the information he posseses to his own govern-ment? He was summoned a few days ago to testify before the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security in executive session. He was under oath, He is reported to have refused to give any information of sub-stance—and, of course, in such a refusal, he is protected against prosecution under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

Again and again it is said that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has endeavored to persuade Browder to give under oath the history of the Communist party as Browder knows it—the very material sought by "The Fund for the Republic"—but he has declined

The question naturally arises whether "The Fund for the Republic" can be sure that it is getting complete information from a man who declines to testify under oath before his own government. HOLDOUT?

Various attempts have been made in recent years to have Browder make a clean breast of what he knows. There have been suggestions that some charitable foundation grant money to finance him during the period when he devotes his whole time to refreshing his recellection of what happened when he was in command of the Communist party in this country. These efforts collapsed because those to whom Browder talked became convinced he was holding back the key parts of the Browder's position is that the Communist party never engaged in espionage while he was connected with it. Maybe he was unaware of that phase but, if so, he should not object to telling who he met at meetings from 1929 to 1945 and what they said, and what officials of the American government or other governments were in consultation with him and when and under what circumstances.

A spokesman for "The Fund for the Republic" says that the organization isn't interested in organization isn't interested in obtaining "espionage secrets" and that Browder will not write any books or studies or "control a single comma or comment" that goes into any of the projects for which $250,000 has been granted by the Ford Foundation.

But the information when

But the information, when made available to "The Fund for the Republic," either has to be credited or discarded.

Some who have talked with Browder in recent years have come to the conclusion that he is interested only in getting across his version of Communist party activities. TO THE EDITOR:
The other night I watched a wrestling match over televi-

"Isn't Eddie thrilling in uniform? I think he's number 24,"

With Blushes We Acknowledge Kind Remarks of Mr. Wilson

MODESTY forbade our opening the subject. But now that Assemblyman Charles H. Wilson has suggested state officialdom ought to be thinking of some suitable way to com-mend Long Beach for its contribution to state progress and welfare, it is not out of order to make further comment.

Mr. Wilson, of course, said it in connection with the tidelands revenue is-sue. He said that instead of scheming to take the city's tidelands assests away, the state ought to give Long Beach a citation. The purpose here is to give

Mr. Wilson's idea the courtesy of acknowledgement - and some added documentation. It was a pretty compliment he

He mentioned that Long Beach had contributed the cost of the State College campus site (nearly $1 million), that it had provided the Navy with a base site for $1, that it had purchased right-ot-way for the state freeway. He mentioned harbor development, the proposed tidelands project such as the Auditorium Annex and the Armed Services YMCA, the Marina project.

It is obvious that all these projects are of definite value to Long Beach itself. But it is fair to recognize, as did Mr. Wilson, that they offer benefits that extend far beyond the cor-porate limits of Long Beach. That is an im-portant point in connection with the legal and legislative issues involved in the tidelands

Because the Supreme Court in the Mallon case indicated that tidelands oil money should be spent primarily in the interest of the state -with local benefits only incidental—the auditorium annex and Armed Services YMCA have been held up pending legal determination of their status.

These facilities, when built, will serve the entire area.

So also would a major beach development here. What difference is there, from the standpoint of public benefit, between a city beach park development at Long Beach and the state beach park at Huntington Beach? If state money can be spent at Huntington Beach —and it is properly spent there— use of money from the state-granted tidelands should be justified in the development of beach facilities at Long Beach.

This is a major beach resort city in the largest concentration of population in the state. What we do to develop our beach and similar facilities serves that population. It serves a great many more people than mountain area parks and other facilities which have received state tidelands money.

But to get back to Mr. Wilson's suggestion for some symbol of state appreciation of Long Beach, possibly the strongest justification for such a thing would be the contribution Long Beach made to the state's fight for the tidelands against federal seizure.

As every reader of these columns knows, the state might not even have its tidelands if Long Beach had not given its vigorous leadership to that struggle. And there was a time in that controversy when Long Beach could have compromised, to its own benefit but at cost to the state-and refused to do so on principle and out of loyalty to California. LOYALTY 'REWARDED'

Since then, that loyalty has been "re-warded" by a greedy attack on the city's tidelands resources. This has been accompanied by a continuous and unjustified assault upon the city's good name by the sponsor of the seizure measure, who calls frequent press conferences and hurls his charges.

Other responsible California leaders might well follow Mr. Wilson's example and rebuke the author of these unfounded accusations.

DEMOS ARGUE—Meanwhile, Democratic leaders in California were involved in an argument touched off by last week's move to induce Adlai Stevenson to file the state's 1956 presidential primaries.

John B. Elliott, veteran Democratic leader, criticized State Chairman Elizabeth Snyder and National Committeeman Paul Ziffren and other party officials for their endersement of Stevenson. He charged it was an "improper use" of the party machinery and called upon the officials to retreat their and comment or ery and called upon the officials to retract their endorsement or resign. "Principal among their duties." he said. "is to see that all candidates in the primary get fair and impartial treatment. 'Radio Rescue' Pretty Scary Stuff, Kids!

DEAR KIDS:
Honest, you ought to pass up television just once and see a real live stage play. The one we mean is "Radio Rescue," and it's being put on by the Children's Theater out at the new theater building on the Long Beach College campus.

lege campus.

Parts of the play are real tense. Some are downright scary. If things like almost getting caught in an old mill, or a train almost getting wrecked give you the jitters, well then, you better stay home, because this play is jam packed with adventure and sort of gives you goose bumps. Little ones.

It's about a 14-year-old boy and his 13-year-old sister. They're orphans, very smart ones, who reade a homemade radio set-really work up in the attic of the orphanage. Mrs. Eugene, Temkin and Mrs. John E. Arkush Jr. play those parts, and thourse just neglect they're just perfect.

WELL, THE MEAN OLD headmistress (Mrs. Irving Nissen-haum) discovers their secret and SEATTLE, Wash. (U.P.) Washington and Stanford exchanged first period touchdowns and then battled tooth and toenail to a 7-7 tie in a Pacific Coast Con-ference football thriller before an estimated 43,500 fans Saturday.

The tie halted a three game winning streak for the Huskies in conference play and dampened their hopes for Rose Bowl competition. On the other hand, it was the best league effort Stanford has made this season, having been dropped twice in PCC competition.

Goal line stands by both teams were the order of the day and fumbles set up both touchdown plays.

for one touchdown and Dick Murtland powered for a pair Saturday as Army bounced back from two defeats to flatten Columbia's tattered Lions, 45-0, before 22,500 bored spectators.

The crushing Cadets, as expected, dominated a "no-contest game" as they overwhelmed the three-time losers.

Army started its landslide victory when Columbia's Jim Mooney got off a limping 10-yard punt. Army took over on the Columbia 31 and in three plays Cadet Mike Zeigler swept end from the 10 to score. Ralph Chesnauskas kicked the point.

Army added three touchdowns in the second quarter. The first was a 66-yard drive, topped on the 11th play when Pat Uebel plunged from the three. The second was a 12-play, 69-yard drive with Bob Munger slicing tackle from the six and Lash gave Army a 27-0 halftime lead with his 72-yard scoring run through tackle.

Murtiand set up the next Army touchdown with a 35-yard punt return to the Columbia 13. Carrying on four of the five subsequent plays, Murtiand finally took it over from the one. Army drove 61 yards at the opening of the fourth quarter with Murtiand carrying it over from the nine and the final Army touchdown was set up when Chesnauskas recovered a Columbia fumble on the Lions 28. up Minnesota shook proud Michi-gan to its very foundations Saturday before the top-ranked football team in the land wiped out a two-touchdown delicit for a harrowing 14-13 victory.

The thrice - beaten Gophers startled a crowd of 64,434, a regional television audience and the unbeaten Wolverines with two lightning touchdowns in the first quarter and appeared des-tined for the upset of the sea-

But Michigan gathered itself for a sudden touchdown late in the second period on two bril-liantly executed pass plays, then killed the Gophers' upset hopes with a nine-yard touchdown pitch from sophomore Jim Van Pelt to Tom Maentz in the third period.

THE VITAL PLAY, although it appeared relatively unimpor-tant at the time, was Terry Barr's block of Mike Falls' conversion try after the second Gopher touchdown, Tony Branoff and Van Pelt kicked perfect placements for Michigan's nargin. Famed for its talent for exploiting rival mistakes, Michigan put itself in trouble twice in the

Once-beaten Notre Dame, parlaying breaks and a bruising ground attack built around Jim Morse, Aubrey Lewis and Dean Stueder, avenged its only setback of last year Saturday with a 22-7 triumph over Purdue before a sellout crowd of 55,500.

The Irish, their 11-game winning streak snapped by Michigan State last week, whistled through Purdue's secondary with awesome ease.

THEY TURNED two Purdue fumbles and a pass interception into touchdowns and added a fourth period safety to make vic-Tory complete.

Purdue, which blasted the South Benders' 13-game winning skein a year ago when Lenny Dawson passed for four touchbawsin passed for four touch-downs, marched all the way only once following a Notre Dame fumble in the second period. Daw-sen then rifled a 13-yard pass to end Len Zyzda in the end zone. That was the only time the junior quarterback from Alliance, Ohio, was effective.

In-all, Dawson completed 11 of 21 passes for 104 yards and one 21 passes touchdown.

MORSE'S THIRD period pass interception netted the Irish their third score. They ate up 46 vards in nine plays, Lewis 46 yards in nine plays, Lewis dashing around right end for the gan three before he could recover.

Finky McNamara sped back to the Michigan 24 with the ensuing punt, Ken Yackel harreled to the 13, then to the eight and Michigan State's Earl Morrall a 21-7 victory over Himos sophomore Bob Schultz streaked to seed two touchdown passes and over on the next play.

Bus Drivers to Consider Firm's Offer

A proposal from the Long Beach Motor Bus Co. for a new work contract will be considered by AFL bus drivers at meetings at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Monday at Labor Temple.

The bus drivers already have voted to strike at 12:01 a.m. Oct. 31 unless a new contract is reached by then.

The company's proposal includes a 5-cent hourly across-the-board increase, a 5-cent hourly increase in April, 1956 an additional 4-cent hourly hike Oct. 1, 1956, a $20-per-month pension benefit increase and overtime provisions.

The union wants a 24-cenhourly across-the-board increase effective immediately.

THERE HAS been some conjecture by the union as to whether or not the company offer actually has been made. Raymond Gregg, union business agent, said the company made the offer but only on condition that all union negotiators accept it. Gregg said he objected, thereby making the offer void. However, J. F. Wertenberger, regional manager for the bus company, said the firm had made an offer and that "if it's ac-an offer and that "if it's ac cepted, we certainly would carry out its provisions.

Meanwhile, Federal Conciliator
Jules Medoff said he would await results of the Monday union meeting before he takes additional action to avert the strike.

The coroner's office said a note band, Timothy F. Leary, said "I cannot live without your love."

Leary summoned the fire de-partment with an inhalator in a vain attempt to revive the night-gown-clad Mary Ann Leary, 33 mother of two children.

Leary told police his wife had been upset emotionally and recently had consulted a psychiatrist.

DAVY CROCKETT is fading. American kids, like American grownups, can go just so long for a fad, and it is apparent the hero of the Alamo is soon to be allowed to occupy his traditional niche in history.

Local record and sheet music houses say it's all over. The kids are now going for another Dis-ney thing, "Lady and the Tramp!" Ah, that Disney.

So perhaps our last Davy Crockett story comes today from Seaside Hospital, where William Steinwachs, age 11, was a recent patient.

After he went home, a call came from his mother asking that an immediate search be made for the lad's "Life of Davy Crockett" that he had left be-

Bart Eurgin, whose building firm (W. Jay Burgin) goes way back to the real Zaferia days, went right out to check the old timers in the neighborhood. He couldn't find anyone who re-membered there was ever a man around here named Zaferia.

DR. PALMER is past president of the American Nature Study Society, the National Association of Biology Teachers, the National Council in Elementary Science, and the National Rechard Science Teachers Assn. He is a member of the National Research Council and has served as chairman of the wildife, teacher training, and pre-college education committees of that organization.

He was the first Fulbright teaching fellow to New Zealand and represented American conservation societies at the 1934 commeting of the International Union for Protection of Nature, at Copenhagen. He will represent the American societies at Edinburgh in 1956.

See Three Members of the faculty—Dr. Charles Burch, Dr. Richard G. Miller, and Dr. Donald Shipley—received instruction under Dr. Palmer at Cornell. Local school records show there was. (I'm assuming that a man who get on the school board in 1889 was prominent.)

Like Bro. Burgin, I'm intrigued with this little quirk in local history and would like to know more about M. H. Zaferia if anyone has any information.

U.S. Books May Fathom Booms, Busts

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Federal Reserve Board today unveiled a new na-tional bookkeeping system designed to help penetrate the mysteries of how and why economic ups and downs take place.

It is called "a flow-of-funds system of national accounts." It has been nearly 20 years in development.

development.

It involves periodic publication of economic data in a form that, for one thing, may provide an answer to a hot political guestion — whether a tax cut that lowers business costs results eventually in benefits to consumers, or whether the man in the street is benefited most by a tax cut that helps him directly.

For the first time, the new

For the first time, the new For the first time, the new thousand the first time, the new to so on in the labyrinth of the economy brings together both financial and non-financial detail in one comprehensive study. Previous over-all economic accounts like the gross national product figures and national increduct figures and national incounts nee the gross national approduct figures and national income statistics developed by the Commerce Department have dealt more with what happened than with how it came to pass.

THE NEW ACCOUNT records not only the fact that you bought a car, a house or a refrigerator; it also shows where you got the money for the down payment, how much of the transaction was on credit, who provided the credit, and how your purchase sent ripples of money and credit up and down the line.

It also is calculated to show what general developments take place after a tax cut. If the cut is mainly for individuals, the account would show what the public does with its increased income—whether savings or consumption increase, and in what types.

A reserve board staff task force, which began work in 1946, has set up flow-of-fund tables for all years beginning with 1939 through 1954.

The Reserve Board said the tables now will be published annually, probably starting in August, 1956, and eventually on a quarterly basis.

New Records of Prosperity Seen in '56

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (P) -Twenty-eight leading economists and industrialists today told. Secretary of Commerce Weeks that 1956 will bring higher prosperity than 1955 — which is breaking all-time economic records.

The forecast was delivered at the closed meeting here of the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council with Weeks and two other cabinet officers, Secretary of the Treasury Hum-phrey and Secretary of Welfare Folsom.

It represented the unanimous finding of BAC's technical panel of 14 private industry economists, and was affirmed by individual reports from as many heads of large enrocations. All are members of the 162-man, are members of the 1024 Thiue ribbon" advisory body, Thiue ribbon" advisory 1909.

Weeks and Donald K. David, chairman of BAC's economic policy committee and former dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business, briefed reporters on the three-and-one-half-hour economic symposium.

David summarized for report-

1. Retail sales this year will run $ to $ per cent higher than last, and in 1956 will be as high "or perhaps a little higher."
2. Industry's outlay for new plants and equipment, spurred by consumer demand, will maintain the present high rate—about 29 billion dollars annually.
3. The trend of rising employment and failing unemployment "will continue into 1956."

All we have strength enough to say at this point is "wuz wunnerful" in regards district Kiwanis convention in San Diego which ended officially Wednesday but for several Long Beach couples went on for the rest of the week as they scattered to various places to round out festivities.

couples went on for the rest of the week as they scattered to various places to round out festivities.

Among those who put on their best bonnets and headed for the border city last Sunday were Kay and "Smitty" Smith, Hal and Helen Moore (Hal is Downtown Club prexy), Kenny and Dorris Martinson, Joe and Dorothy Mullarky, Howell and Vyrle Honeywell, Caroline and Sted Gould, Hope and Bob Cunningham and Floyd and Emily Beswick—all from the downtown club.

East Long Beach Kiwanians and their "annes," not to be outdone, sent a good-sized delegation, too, and among those tasting of the joys of the giant get-together were George and Peg Cain (George is chief man of the club), Evelyn and "Kirk Kirkeeng, Connie and Phil Putnam, Esther and "Tuck" Thompson and Mabel and George Swift.

The Uptown Club—usually one of the liveliest at any conclave—was well represented by old prez himself, Ray Bliley, and wife, Sylvia, as well as Mabel and Jim Bentley, Fern and John Kelly, Eetty Lou and Ed Lovell and Grace and George Calderwood.

Suppose it's like looking down the long, wrong end of a shot-gun barrel to reach 'way back to last week when the Long Beach Dinner Club met but it was such a good evening can't resist. Mary and Julian Knutson topped off the proceedings with cocktails for a group after the meeting, which took place in the Pageant Room of the Wilton. Margaret had just finished re-doing her house with shutters and things and it looked so pretty everyone talked constantly about the home's appearance and the excellent talk of the evening by Honorable Walter H. Judd, Congressman from Minnesota.

All even up now is Marilyn and John Howe's family with two boys and two girls since the arrival of little son John Alton. Unfortunately the family will be leaving Long Beach soon to take up residence in San Fernando Valley where Marilyn and John are in the process of building a new home. They expect, durn it, to move up thataway in December so John can be closer to his work with North American in the development of atomic power for peacetime use.

The excitement of a first plane ride belonged to Mazelle Willhoit the other day when, with husband Harold, she traveled up to San Francisco on a joy jaunt. "Like it?" we asked. "Yeeess" was the dubious reply. But even so Mazelle, in her brief experience, thinks its a wonderful way to travel.

San Francisco certainly seems to be stealing a lot of local trade in the vacation department. Of course Joanne and Bill Dummit didn't go up this week just for fun (which they had, of course) but for Bill to attend a dental convention.

New Clinic Observes First Year

By ELAINE RISINGER

A little girl with wide brown eyes sat quietly in the clinic waiting room, a little afraid of the whitecoated man and nurse who popped in and out of the rooms. She would have been pretty except for one facial mar . . . her eyes were crossed.

In another chair nearby a 4-year-old whispered to save his sore throat. This was his fifth siege with tensillitis in a year. On down the room, youngsters waited, some with minor illnesses, some demanding major attention, but all about to receive a boost toward healthy, happy childhood as a gift from 160 women.

For nine years, Children's Benefit League has tucked handicapped children under its protective wing. To this goal, they dedicate fund raising efforts and their volunteer work, always trying to extend their always trying to extend their scope of help, Mrs. William Mohler, president of the league,

This fall marks a particularly important anniversary in league history. Children's Clinic, sponsored jointly by the league and Community Hospital, completed its first year by moving into new headquarters behind the hospital.

As an extension of their work, league members now financially and with volunteer efforts support the clinic in addition to providing medical care for youngsters privately referred to the group, she

Clinic Record

League members are justifiably proud of the initial record of the clinic which is staffed by resident physicians of the hospital, pediatricans and consulting specialists. Howard B. Hatfield, administrator of the hospital, reports that during the past 12 months 65 patients were accepted for 65 patients were accepted for service and 48 cases were given advice on medical care.

And he explains the opera-tion of the clinic this way: Before patients are accepted, Mrs. Irma Hall, social service worker at the hospital, takes worker at the nospital takes their case history to determine the parents' financial problems. Patients eligible for county care are sent there, and ones who are able to pay for medical attention are discontinuous and discontinuous and discontinuous disco for medical attention are di-rected to private physicians. Although free and open to any youngster, the clinic chiefly serves residents of Long Beach. Lakewood, Artesia, Paramount and Bellflower who are usually referred by school nurses and the health department. Often parents ask for only temporary medical help during a slack period.

Many of the patients, who range from birth to 14 years old, require only a few visits to the offices, but when surgery or hospitalization is needed, the league is ready to help again if the parents are linagain if the parents are un-able to assume the financial responsibility.

Besides paying for operating costs, members donate time at the clinic which is open Friday mornings from 9 m. until noon. They sometimes assist Mrs. Hall with any last minute case histories, but usually they entertain chil-dren in the waiting room with toys and help the medical staff weighing and measuring the patients.

League Volunteers

League members provide that extra "civilian" contact before the youngster is examined by the doctor. This creates a feeling of security in both parents and the child, Mrs. Hall says in praise of the league's work league's work

Although the clinic is only officially opened on Friday mornings, the actual working days extend throughout the week. Mrs. Hall reserves Tuesdays for case interviews. And any extra appointments with specialists are fitted in at a convenient time, she adds.

Last year, seven pediatricians and 10 specialists besides staff doctors donated their services to treat the chil-

When plans for a Children's Clinic were being formulated, the hospital asked the league to sponsor the venture, for through the years this group has been active in children's work there.

One of the organization's

One of the organization's first philanthropic efforts after the founding in November 1946 by Mmes, Irving Koppel, Henry McCleur, Joseph P. Wilson, William Mohler and Fred Stineman, was the presentation of incubators to Seaside and Community Heavitch. and Community Hospitals.

Later in 1949, the league set up The Showcase, a gift shop at the hospital which is staffed daily by members. The hundreds of dollars of profits are used to treat emergency and needy cases brought into the hospital other than the clinic, the president says. The league also has decorated the alcove in the pediatrics wing of the hospital, donated a wheel chair and television set. When the clinic was ready to move to large quarters this summer, the organization contributed S1,000 raised at a recent dance to buy new equipment needed.

Varied Aid

To pin point each achievement by the group would be a major task. Out of the league's $5.000 yearly philanthropy fund, which is expanded when needed, also comes aid to ma-jor drives besides care for the handicapped children referred to the group by school nurses and the health department. Doctors donate their medical scrvice.

Mrs. Mohler explains that Mrs. Mohler explains that the organization has kept itself free of any alliance with a hospital so that members decide how funds are spent. Through the years various hospitals and clinics have received equipment from the league. The purchases of a rocking bed for Rancho Los Amigos and a special table for Amigos and a special table for Tichenor Clinic are but a few examples of their generosity.

At each autumn general membership gathering a spe-cial guest speaker connected with children's work appears and as is the custom, a contribution is made to the organization she represents. On Monday, Eleanor Powell will discuss the Sunair Sanitorium at a gathering in Lakewood Country Club, Mrs. Mohler re-

Part of the members' responsibilities is giving at least 72 hours of service a year at league projects, such as the clinic and showcase or on committees. Provisionals (mem-bership is limited to 160) must complete their volunteer requirements during their year's training to become acquainted with league work. Funds for philanthropic deeds are obtained through ways and means projects. The membership is divided into 21 bridge groups, a sewing section and a handicraft group, Mrs. Mohler says. At each monthly bridge meeting, mem-

THE SMILE of a happy, healthy child is the only reward asked by Children's Benefit League for their financial contributions and volunteer efforts. Forty-Niners Pan for 'Diamond Jim'

Diamond Jim, a fabulous character in the gay 90's, has been brought out of the musty archives to which he had been exiled by the Associated Women's Student at Long Beach State Col-

Diamond Jim will be selected from eligible males nominated by various campus organizations. As a kicker to bring reluctant males to the forc, an "immense" diamond stickpin will be presented to the winner at the AWS Formal "It's a Woman's World's The New York." World" on Nov. 5.

A success story is one that all of us like to read about, and some art students from State College are on their way. Bob Gromendyke, campus sign painter, won first award for his hand carved wooden bowl in the Young American Craftsman national annual competition in New York this summer, and a former colleague and his wife, Jack Ageaceli, won honorable mention in last week's art show here.

Douglas MacFadden new has a one-man show in the Los Angeles County Medical Bidg, and is opening his own shop here in town. Ray Hein won the National Hickok Award and his designs are now being produced on men's jewelry and beit buckles.

One of the busiest clubs on campus is the Newman Club, Representatives will journey today to Los Angeles to attend the Newman Leadership Conference, and then next Friday trek to Santa Ana for a regional Halloween dance. Goblin and ghost costumes are out for this crew. It's old-fashioned bathing suits, and rightly so for a bunch from the beach city.

Parents will get a break this Sunday, and members of the Delta Delta Delta sorority are giving it to them. The parents of sorority members are being entertained at the student lounge from 3 to 5 p. m. A dessert will be served, and the main topic of discussion will be the organizational structure of Tri Delta.

Friendship, help and encouragement is being given to the patients of the Norwalk State Hospital by members of Psi Chi, national honorary fraternity in psychology. A group of volunteers from the club go to the hospital once a month to participate in a program of recreation and entertainment for the patients in the wards. The program is sponsored by the Red Cross.

A "Glasses for Unfortunate Classes" week will be held at A "dasses for Chlorumate Classes" week will be held at State College soon, and the Home Economics Club does not mean drinking glasses, rather the kind that lie around the house in secluded nooks collecting dust, and that cause you to say when you see them. "I wonder what I keep those for?" The old eye glasses, rims and frames will be sent overseas for those people who can't afford to see without help.

Regular guys will be getting together Nov. 5 and 6 when Sigma Alpha Epsilon representatives congregate here for the installation of the new fraternity chapter at State College, San Diego State, UCLA, USC. Occidental College and Santa Eurbara all will be represented at the installation of the 137th Chapter of SAE.

Pledges only, will be the order of the night Oct. 31, and to celebrate the eve of goblins and ghosts will be a spook dance given by the Delta Zeta pledges. Glamor reigned Friday night when the Long Beach Petroleum Club opened its doors to more than 450 members and their wives for formal dedication ceremonies, celebrated with cocktails and hor d' oeuvries at the ultra-modern new club, 4365 Atlantic Ave.

The luxurious club, whose membership is made up entire-ly of men connected with the oil industry, has been built as a gathering place for oil men by Arthur Morgan, owner of Ricart's which is adjacent to the new clubrooms.

The building has 7,500 square feet of floor space, and its facilities include three banquet rooms with a combined seating capacity of 275, a lounge, game room, dining room, kitchen and bar. The banquet facilities also will be available to other organizations.

Vernon Castle, for seven years manager of Lakewood Country Club, has been hired as manager of the Petroleum Club. The beautiful new clubrooms are the handiwork of Kenneth S. Wing, architect, Bernard and Geneva Hammer, decorators, and Aaron Schultz, furnishings.

"Hey, Mom, what's to cat?"-a well-known afternoon theme song in our American household. Fortunately there's the cookie jar, the refrigerator, stocked with fruit and milk—to say nothing of the meat ready for the evening meal.

This is life in America—or at least in most of America. Quite different the scenes in more than half the households of the world where the cries of hunger of children haunt the hearts of mothers and fathers.

With the belief that freedom and prosperity can be assured any nation only as it is assured all, United Church Women the nation over have set Friday, Nov. 4, as World Community Day and for its theme have chosen "Give us this day our daily bread."

Long Beach United Church Women will gather for their meeting at the First Methodist Church beginning at 10:30 nurch beginning at 10:30 m. and continuing till 3

The church for many years has been trying to help answer the prayer as suggested by the theme of the day as it has sent missionaries not only to take spiritual food but the help and "know how" to produce more and greater variety of physical food. Even when our government joined to help it was not possible to meet all the extended to be the programment of the pro the overwhelming problems of want in the world. Another need to be met is that of clothing for our World refugees and this year's material project is "Parcels for Men and Boys"—clothing for those youth and men in countless numbers who are now slipping across the border to West Germany and freedom. Child Care Averages Are Guide Posts to Gaining

A. A weight of 12 pounds A. A weight of 12 pounds 8 ounces is perfectly normal for an infant of 3½ months. Standards, as indicated on charts, are only averages, and you should not take them too literally. A baby that weighs a lot at birth, as yours did, often does not gain as much during the first few months as one weighing less at birth.

The time a baby spends nursing is no indication of the amount of milk taken. Many babies get 80 per cent of all their milk from the breasts in the first five minutes of nursing. The fact that she's a relaxed baby and sleeps well shows that she is not hungry. A dissatisfied baby would cryafter feedings and would not be likely to sleep through the night.

Meats do not have to be given this early. Some doctors do recommend them at this age, but others wait until the baby is five or six months old. There is no set rule about this, as some babies are ready earlier than others.

Teacher Shortage Blamed on Lack of Consideration

On every hand we hear of a teacher shortage, and any mention of it brings the wondering look and the innocent inquiry, "But why? They have such short hours, only five-day weeks, long summer vacations—you'd think they'd jump at it."

Well, they're not jumping just that way, as one can easily see. Why?

Salaries are none too high. Some are disgracefully low. But while that accounts for part of the reluctance of young part of the refluctance of young people to take on the teacher's responsibilities, it is not by any means the chief one. A good salary never made a good teacher a better one, nor a poor one a good one but good teacher a better one, nor a poor one a good one, but it does go a long way toward strengthening the spirit of a teacher and that is the important factor in this reluctance to teach. The teacher's spiritual needs are ignored too often. too often.

A teacher is an ordinary human being with all of a human being's hungers, ambihuman being's hungers, ambitions, emotions and responses to experiences. This plain fact has been overlooked, often and completely. A teacher has educated and trained for his post. Otherwise he could not be appointed. That education, that professional training, is ignored the day he takes his place in a classroom. He is bound, tied, gagged hy the rules. He is not only told what he can teach, which is to a degree essential, but he is told when and how, exactly, he is to teach it. he is to teach it.

It is as though he came to his task as unprepared as an infant. This is a shock, a spiritual shock to one who was graduated in the pride of ac-complishment. He thought he was a teacher ,but he learns was a teacher but he learns is is only a transmitter of an-other's power. Power, and it is power over him, is away down-town in "The Office." Would you want to feel that you had no say about what was needed to do your work? Would you want to have to work through and around and about orders that thwarted your day's work? Many a teacher faces just that situation.

Then there is the matter of Then there is the matter of criticism. Fault-finding is a letter term. Anybody, anybody at all, can tell a teacher what is the matter with him and everybody does, and the pedagogue has little means of defense. If he wants to committee the recombination he can harms the useplain he soon learns the use-lessness of it. He must first go to the assistant principal, then to the principal, then to the assistant superintendent—

He Should Show More Restraint

Youthful Minister Lauded for His Beautiful Sermon

Mark Anthony showed that a funeral sermon should list some of the specific good deeds of the departed. His unselfishness and kindliness should be stressed, for those positive virtues are a solace to the family and an inspiration to the living friends.

Relevant quotations from Psalms and the Gospels, as John 14:1-3, are an ideal inclu-conf 14:1-3, are an ideal inclusion, but don't recite scripture exclusively for the entire service. For a recital is never an oration! Every sermon should be an oration of a special, evangelistic sort to inspire and uplift men.

Rev. Busacca's father and the latter's boyhood friend, came over to America from Italy, where they were boys studying for the priesthood. Somehow they got switched to the Evan-gelien. United Brethren denomination.

Case P-078: Rev. Dwight Busacca, aged 29. is paster of the Memorial E. U. B. church in Milwaukee, Wis.

Mrs. Crane and I were there to attend the funeral of Dan Stair, who had been a neighbor of mine at Fort Wayne, Ind., 40 years ago. We sat through the funeral service in the church sanctuary

"That's the most beautiful funeral service I have ever heard." Mrs. Crane whispered to me, at its conclusion.

Rev. Eusacea briefly mentioned Mr. Stair and his posiabout his inventive genius and many patents. Then he cited his constructive work in the community, and finally shifted over to the usual reference from St. John wherein Jesus

"In my father's house are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you."

It was a very dignified and personalized sermon, that in-spired everybody in the congregation. And it fulfilled the formula for an ideal funeral

(1) Personal mention of the deceased in a laudable manner so that the audience can be inspired by his good deeds or community efforts;

(2) Assurance to the family of the eternal life with the further recoloreement of their faith by use of Christ's positive premise in St. John 14:1.3:

(3) A 16-minute inspirational message for everybody to exalt the soul and lift people momentarily from this mundane world into a brief glimpse of eternal verities. A funeral should be a clergy-

A funeral should be a clergy-man's greatest evangelistic op-portunity for at that time many old reprobates and others who have drifted far from their ethical childhood moorings are back in the fa-miliar church pears miliar church pews.

They are then meditative and open-minded. They constitute what psychologists call a "polarized" audience, for they are already wondering about our purpose on this carth and whither we journey at such a graduation from it.

A elergyman thus has a very unique audience. He gets un-divided attention from people who may never be in a church who may never be in a church again. So he should uplift them by a 15-minute dignified sermon, and take them up to the top of the mountain, as Moses went of old, so they can obtain a momentary glimpse into heaven.

A good funeral sermon should also contain specific references to the departed so congregation will know whether it is a man, woman or child. Some services are so vague, the listeners don't even know who is in the casket.

Why Grow Old?

Must Work to Realize Dreams

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

What has happened to the glorious dreams of your youth? What has happened to the glorious dreams or your youth: Remember when you pictured yourself as a famous actress, artist, lawyer, musician, writer or teacher? Think back to the time when you thought you would have made (or married) a lortune by the time you were 35. Think of all the traveling fortune by the time you were 35. Think of all the traveling you were going to do and of how lovely you were going to remain.

Yes, you had great goalsery single day you live if you all youngsters do. But when will not allow your approach to it to become dull because of responsibilities, hecticness, and a constant, frustrating effort you were dreaming of these heights, you were somehow supposed to be whisked away by some special kind of genius or helt. to attain your "great goal." or luck.

Then came the struggle. With your eyes still on the goal ahead, you began to notice goal ahead, you began to notice you weren't getting the immediate appreciation or promotion you had expected. You may not have noticed the change in your habits which were penalizing you but somehow the dream began to lose some of its brilliance. some of its brilliance.

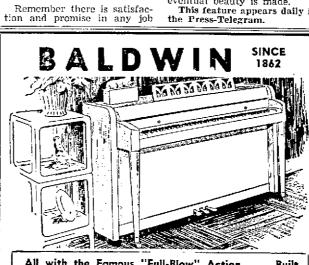

With your eyes still on the peaks, you probably became disappointed in people, dis-couraged with slow progress, harassed by fatigue and worry and daily routine.

If you haven't learned by now to lower the goal or be content in the slow progress toward it, you will go right on missing some of the little things of which success and happiness and beauty are made.

You may have missed much of the joy in living because you failed to look with onthuslasm and appreciation at each day as it arrived. Perhaps you failed to see the opportunities for happiness and success which lay all about you. There is opportunity for happiness in every person you meet. There is humor and beauty and stimulation in ev-

you do if you will bring energy, belief and intelligence to it. Somehow small jobs, well done, turn into bigger ones. The same thing is true of beauty, good looks and good health. There is no magic potion, no miraculous product, which will give you vibrant health or prolonged youthfulness. We must each day apply ourselves to the small essentials which build health and promote good looks. These are the materials out of which eventual beauty is made.

Associated Press Correspondent ROME—Your friend from home fingered his wine glass, leaned close as a conspirator and asked Rome's most familiar question:

Mrs. Luce came anyway and what happened is history. Trieste was peacefully partitioned. Communism is losing tioned. Communism is losing ground. The Italian economy is at record levels. The strategic hole in western defenses created by Austria's neutralization has been plugged, thanks to an Italian invitation—through NATO—for American combat troops with an atomic potential to move onto Italian soil.

Possibly no one American had more to do with these suc-

LONG BEACH

Congratulations to the Long Beach

to the Long Beach PETROLEUM CLUB

E are proud and honored to have had a part in the creation of one of Long Beach's most modern buildings and our City's first Petroleum Club. The opening of the Club marks a high point in the successful history of the oil industry in Long Boach. For the first time, the oil industry has a contral meeting place which already has become one of our City's show places.

Impressive as the Petroleum Club building itself is, even more important to Long Beach is the high purpose that inspired the Club's creation. Through the Club, the oil industry has dedicated itself to an increasingly active role in the civic affairs of Long Beach for the benefit of our community. We salute you.

ROSE FRANKEN

THE HUNCH THAT PAID OFF

by Rose Franken

NOVELIST, magazine writer and playwright Rose Franken, best known for her "Claudia" stories, has just had her latest novel, Intimate Story, published by Doubleday & Co.

Most-people scoff at following hunches. So did I — before I realized that no matter how idiotic it seemed at the time, blind obedience to an impulse has often worked out to be right. I can't say that I have had a perfect score, but for the most part it really has.

There was one day in February, 1942, that I shall never forget because it was the time that I acted most like a complete idiot in following a hunch.

The day began with a light fall of snow near Old Lyne, Conn., where my husband, Bill, and I were running our 1,000-acre farm in between writing stories. Over breakfast, we listened to the radio interspersing music with post-Pearl Harbor news and warnings to motorists to avoid driving in the blizzard that was blanketing New England.

There was nothing immediate to worry about. Bill was driving over to the state university at Storrs to get some farming advice, and later in the day we expected my oldest son, Paul, to drive down from Quincy, Mass., where he was stationed as an Army lieutenant after having enlisted upon graduation from college.

I am a worrier, so I was a little hesitant about letting Bill drive to Storrs; but he laughed at me and went to get into his heavy clothes. "I'm worried about Paul," I called to him. Bill came clumping in in his heavy boots. "If you have nothing better to do than worry, go ahead," he said. "Paul knows how to take care of himself." With that, he went outside to get his car from the garage.

Then Came an Impulse

I looked out. The wind was whipping the snow into small drifts across the road and in the corners of the barnyard. The phone rang. It was Paul. "Don't worry, Mother," his voice came over the wire. "I'll leave about 4:00 this afternoon and be down tonight." But as I put the phone down, an overpowering impulse to drive up to Paul—over 100 miles away—came over me.

Bill came in to kiss me goodbye. "I won't be here when you get back," I heard myself saying. "You'll find something for your lunch. I'm going to Quincy." Bill blinked. "Why!" he asked incredulously. Then he called me all sorts of a lunatic. "I ought to divorce anybody as crazy as you," he said. "Those hunches! Well, I know I can't stop you and I can't let you go alone. Come on."

We drove through one of the worst storms I have ever seen in my life, with the snow so thick that at times it blotted out the road. "Why am I doing this?" I asked Bill. "Because you're a loon," he snapped. It was pitch black and we were half frozen when we got to Quincy. A soldier went to find Paul.

Paul came from his quarters. "What are you doing here?" he yelled. "I told you I'd be down. I was just getting ready to leave!" Bill pointed to me: "Your Mother...."

We started to talk. Then a soldier handed Paul a message. He said shortly, "We're alerted. Leaves are canceled."

We spent 15 minutes with him and drove back alone. Bill didn't talk. "I wish I were as crazy as you," he finally said as we reached home. "It takes a lot of courage."

We didn't see Paul again for five years. A few days later, he shipped out — one of the first sent to New Guinea.

ANYTHING COMES!

If nobody else wants it, this man gets it - usually, that is

by DICK EMMONS

Possibly you don't know the proverb, He who accepts graciously will be given much. I happen to know it because I just made it up. I am dedicating it to my wife, Helen, a girl who is in personal competition with the city

The other night I came home from the office in my usual state of exhaustion, reached out to the girl for her sympathetic kiss and tripped over an unseen object.

"What's this?" I asked with forced interest, picking myself up.

"That? Why, a pedestal for a birdbath, of course," Helen said cheerily, "Nancy Frohm was going to throw it away, but then at the last minute she asked if we could use it."

"Use it!" I said. "Boy, oh, boy! We've been desperate for a birdbath pedestal around here for years!"

"That's what I thought," Helen nodded solemnly. "Remember the time the Denningers gave me the lid to their trash can because Fred ran over the can and they were going to buy a new one? Well, there you have the hirdbath. Just solder it to the pedestal and the birds will never know the difference."

"Well, maybe some of the brighter birds ..." I let my voice trail off, wondering idly where Helen's willing acceptance of discarded items would lead us.

The very next day it led me downtown in an attempt to buy a bookend to match one given her by Amy Fitzgerald. When I got home, I was in no mood for pleasantries.

"Find it?" Helen asked pleasantly.

"Find it?" I snarled. "It's a common style. But I learned something that may interest you. You can't buy one bookend. You have to pay for two. You can eat the second one or hide it in the attic or throw it away, but you still pay for two!"

"Three bookends are better than one." Helen said softly. "Someday somebody will give me the fourth."

I groaned. "What I'm trying to say is that you've got to stop accepting these things. No civilized home has to put up with three matching bookends!"

"Yes, dear," Helen said.

In the days that followed I began to hope that my brief lecture had struck its mark. Only the old, tired objects greeted me each night as I straggled in.

"I haven't seen any new, tired objects around lately," I remarked just last Friday. "Dare I assume that this condition is permanent? Or have our friends stopped offering us their castoffs?"

"Well - " Helen cyed me with what I took , to be doubt. "You do want me to turn them down, don't you?"

"Absolutely," I said. "Always. On every occasion. If they don't want it, it's not good enough for us."

A Lesson Well Learned

Helen brightened. "Thank goodness, Those were the very words I said to Janice this morning when she came over to ask if you'd be interested in buying Phil's golf clubs for some ridiculous price like $25. He's giving the game up."

"Phil's matched irons," I hreathed, "and the set of woods he bought last spring. Was that what you let slip through your pretty fingers?"

"I guess so," Helen yawned. "Anyway, Janice called later and told me she'd gotten a lot more money from somehody else."

I shook my head, dazed at the unreliability of women. Then I sat down stillly, staring vacantly into space. Like a bookend.

I TRAVELED 16,000 MILES IN AFRICA

Here's how an American college graduate, with a minimum of cash and a clever idea,

THE AUTHOR, a 28-year-old New Yorker, wound up his career at Cornell University with a Master of Science degree, practically no cash and an irresistible desire to see the world. He "promoted" enough money to get across the Atlantic and back, then lit out for Africa via France and the Mediterranean. Now back in America, he currently is doing graduate work at the University of Michigan.

by MURRAY MELBIN

On November 24, 1953, I landed in Oran with my 70-pound rucksack on my back. I started south into Africa on a trail that led haphazardly across mountains and deserts, jungles and savannas, rivers and swamps. The map at right shows my route through 24 countries.

I traveled by camel, airplane, mule, bicycle, car, truck, ocean steamer, riverboat, dugout canoe, motorcycle and railroad — plus 600 miles on foot, wearing out two pairs of shoes in the process. I met Tuareg desert tribesmen, witch doctors, Mau Mau, pygmies, cliff dwellers and saucer-lipped native women. Sometimes I fasted for days, sometimes I feasted on land snails, monkey meat and crocodile steaks.

One year after I left Oran, I wound up in Alexandria, Egypt (where I climaxed the trip with a bout of malaria). I had covered 16,000 miles at a cash outlay of exactly $27.61.

I did it with my little, second-hand, $47 camera—the kind that snaps a picture and hands over a print 60 seconds later. It had struck me that with such quick prints I could bargain for transportation and lodging. And I was right. (I also took along a 35-mm. camera and 30 rolls of film.)

Here are bargains I got for my 60-second pictures: a 725-mile airlift from Nairobi, Kenya, to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia—value $80; a 1,272-mile airlift from Asmara, Eritrea, to Cairo, Egypt—value $120; a bus ride from Cairo to Alexandria, plus two handengraved copper trays—value $150; a three-day stay at the exclusive Safari House in Arusha, Tanganyika—value $18.30; four rare thorn carvings from Nigeria—value $12.

And here are moments that stick in my memory:

THRILL RIDE: At Oran I hitched a ride on a big sixwheeled truck loaded with grain, bicycles and wines, bound for Colomb Bechar, an oasis on the northern edge of the Sahara. Heading south at dusk on a dirt track across the Atlas Mountains, we had just cleared the crest of a pass and started downhill when the air brakes conked out.

When we hit the first hairpin turn, the truck started to skid. Smoke curled from under the dashboard and our lights went out. To see the road, the driver had to lean out and steer with one hand.

At the next turn he skidded the truck to cut down our speed, then hurtled on as we hit the straightaway. He did it again... again. There came a turn where the truck skidded toward the edge of the cliff, then for a second stopped completely. In that second I flung myself out of the cab, somehow spotted a watermelon-sized rock and shoved it under the rear wheels. The truck inched forward, rock and all. Then it stopped.

SKEPTIC: This saucer-lipped belle of the Belgian Congo agreed to pose if Melbin would give her a gift. When she saw the snapshot (above) she said: "Not my picture.

You paint picture before you come here, then bring it in that box. I not want picture. I want leg of buffalo far meat." But after much coaxing she accepted the photo.

TRADE: In return for his picture, this Ivory Coast trader drove the author 941 miles through the Sahara in his car.

The driver crawled out of the smoking cab and sank to the ground beside me. We silently shook hands. Eventually he got the air-brake system working again and we drove on toward Colomb Bechar.

MAGICIAN'S HELPER: The day 1 arrived at the oasis, the whole village was talking about Kassagi, a famous Tunisian magician who had come to give a show. Later that day 1 found myself sitting next to him in a cafe.

In broken French I said: "I have heard, sir, that you are a magician."

Without a word Kassagi flicked his right hand. A ball appeared between his fingers, then two, then one again. Smilingly he showed me his empty palms.

"If you will come with me into the sunlight," I said, "I will show you a different kind of magic." Outside I snapped his picture, and during the 60 seconds it developed I kept talking to him in my halting French. Then I whipped out his photograph. Staring at it openmouthed for a moment, Kassagi promptly invited me to join his act that night. He had rented the cafe for his show, and at the climax of the performance he introduced me as a guest magician from America. My trick, he said, was le photographie-express, the fast photograph.

I snapped a picture of a young Arab boy seated in a chair onstage, peeled it off one minute later and held it up for all to see. The cafe rang with shouts of el hamdullah! — Praise be to God! Kassagi was so delighted with my performance that he paid for my board and room for the next three days.

RED CARPET: An open-hearted host was Chief Ogiozughanmwen of the ancient Nigerian village of Benin. My Polaroid picture of him left him speechless with surprise. When he recovered, he had servants prepare sleeping quarters for the "big stranger." Although these included a bed with spotless sheets covered by mosquito netting, the Chief apologized for not being able to do better for such a VIP guest.

Every meal was a feast, and there were enormous quantities of everything. There was ground nut soup, corned beef in palm soup, boiled yams, fufu (a dish of pounded plantain and highly spiced sauce). goose eggs, antelope meat, chicken, roast bananas, papaya and beer. We sat solemnly facing each other on straw mats. A small boy cooled me with a leather fan waved from a respectful distance, and a corps of servants knelt whenever I took a drink.

DR. MELBIN, I PRESUME: In a Belgian Congo village I watched the ritual of the second-burial eeremony. It was being held for the wife of the tribal chief, who had died two years before. Now it was necessary to bury her spirit, so that it would not wander about the forest, making trouble.

The men of the tribe were sitting in a group around an elder, who was chanting a eulogy. At intervals they would respond in chorus. I sat down quietly among the mourners, who at first paid no attention to me whatever. The mosquitoes began to bite. I dug into my bag for insect repellent and put it on my face and hands. Soon several mourners noticed that the insects were leaving me alone.

Even though the burial ceremony was still going on, an old man got up and came over to me. He saluted, showed me a large festering sore on his finger and indicated that he wanted some of my "medicine." I tried vainly to explain that this medicine would do him no good; then, to get rid of him, I made an "applicator" out of a sliver of palm-leaf stem and daubed the repellent on the man's sore. I gave him the wet stick. He smelled it, nodded and saluted again.

I had evidently been elected Medicine Man on the spot, for in another few minutes about a dozen tribesmen had formed a line, quietly waiting to be treated. They were afflicted with an assortment of sores, carbuncles, cuts and infections. In my best professional manner, I carefully examined each case and used a fresh palm twig applicator on every patient. Business boomed at my impromptu open-air clinic for about half an hour. Then I ran out of patients.

FAIR EXCHANGE: In Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, I walked into the office of the local newspaper and told the editor how I had got there. Then I showed him my hole-ridden shoes. I had "spares" — moccasins — but I needed stout shoes to walk on. Could I trade a pair for the story of my trip so far? He said yes — and I still have the clipping to prove it.

LUXURY: In Tanganyika I met George Dove, a white hunter who was about to take three Australians to the Serengeti Plains on a sightseeing safari. It was costing them $300 apiece for the week's trip, but I offered Dove his picture for a chance to go along.

He smiled incredulously and said: "You Yanks are crazy. Tell you what, though. I'll take you along if you give my clients pictures of themselves."

I did, and we set out in an open station wagon. We saw more than 30,000 head of magnificent wild game at close range — a leopard, spitting and snarling in the grass five feet away, antelope covering 40 feet in a single, graceful leap, lions closing in on a wildebeest for their evening meal. With two cookboys busy, we feasted like diners in a plush city restaurant.

FLIES BY DAY: At one point in Tanganyika I was crossing an immense plain alone. There wasn't a sign of another living being — nothing but a limitless waste of scrubby trees and tall grass.

I soon found out why humans avoid this section of East Africa. It is the lair of the deadly tsetse fly, carrier of sleeping sickness. Black and about the size of honey bees, the flies cluster on leafless bushes alongside a trail and attack anything that moves.

There were only a few at first. Then they were on me in a buzzing swarm, stinging like a thousand redhot needles. Flailing my arms to fight them off, I started to run. The sun beat down and sweat ran into my eyes in burning rivulets. I gasped for breath. I tried to run faster, tore up handfuls of grass to beat off the flies — in vain.

Finally, in sheer desperation, I flung down my pack and raced for an open clearing. There, dizzy and panting, I stood still. And there the flies suddenly left me

When I got my breath, I cautiously retrieved my pack and dashed on. Instantly the flies closed in. But now, over a small rise, I spied a clump of trees beside a road. In the shade was a group of natives, apparently waiting for a truck to pick them up. I ran to them — and collapsed.

WITCHCRAFT: In lower Nigeria 1 visited a witch doctor. Natives there believe implicitly in "juju," the power of evil spirits. Even whites in Africa say: "I don't necessarily believe it, but there are things I can't explain."

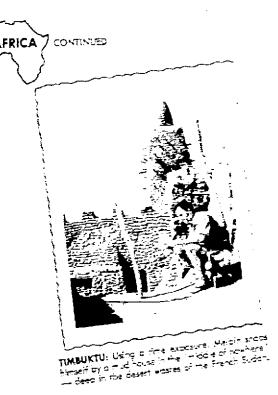

The witch doctor gave me palm wine, first tasting it to show it wasn't poisoned. Then he showed me a wooden head with 200 porcupine quills stuck in it. With this magic, he said, you could make your enemy many miles away feel the pain of the needles.

Then, moistening his hands, he touched my head and invoked a multiple blessing! Honored ancestors, good health, my house untouched, my children protected. As I am unmarried and have no children, I shall have to wait and see about the fourth blessing.

His route traversed 24 countries: Algeria, French Sudan, Upper Volta, Gold Coast, Togo, Dahomey, Nigeria, Cameroons, Tchad, Ubangi-Chari, Belgian Congo, Angola, both the Rhodesias, Mozambique, Nyasaland, Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi, Uganda, Kenya, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Sudan and finally Egypt.

GUEST ARTIST: At a tribal ceremony in a Nigerian village, the drum rityriums move Meliain to join the dancers. "It was poor dancing," the outfloor reports frankly, "but when I finished they cheered."

TELEGRAM: Pounding a slit hollow log, a native flashes word that a white man is coming. One such message preceded Melbin for a full 12 miles.

Melbin uncorked mosquito chaser, Became a congo medicine man

CLOSEST SHAVE: With camera cocked. I crept close to the shore of Lake Edward in Uganda, where hippopotamuses flocked by the hundreds. I happened to glance over my shoulder. About 300 yards away, headed straight toward me, was a huge black elephant.

Turning. I hurried to where I had left my pack. I was pretty sure the elephant hadn't seen me, but I didn't know what he would do if he had. I kept ruaning toward the road a quartet of a mile away.

Suddenly, directly ahead, was another elephant—and we were heading straight for each other. Off to the right behind this one I saw three more. Again I furned, only to find I was headed back toward the lake and the hippos. I was trapped.

I tested for wind direction with a wetted finger and found it was blowing directly between the first elephant and the second group of four. There was no other way to go. As I sprinted forward, downwind, the second group stopped and sniffed suspiciously.

My pack bounced like a pile driver on my back and I thought my heart would burst. Gasping for breath I reached the road, then looked back. The five elephants had joined forces, but the wind had been in my favor; all five were ambling peacefully toward the tiver bank.

SURPRISE: "I don't think you'll get anything out of them. They're a tough outfit, but you can try."

In Cairo, where I was trying to get a free has ride to Alexandria, a friendly Egyptian was talking to me about the Societé des Attohus de Router du Deteri. Trading with the natives in the hinterlands, he pointed out, was one thing: but hargaining with the cost-conscious director of a modern has tompany in Cairo was quite another. I decided to give it a try

Armed with a photo of a street vendor serving drinks to his line's passengers. I called on Monsieur Kfoury, the director. He listened impassively to my story but finally agreed to accept the picture in lieu of fare. When I mentioned I would like to shop in Cairo for some souvenirs, he assigned one of his Arabio-speaking aides to help me bargain.

Although it meant spending more money than I had planned. I let the aide bargain for two hand-engraved copper trays. Just as I was about to pay, my companion said: Put your money away. These are a gift from the tompan).

LAST STOP: I arrived home in New York in December 1954. Having already worn out the shoes I had promoted in Southern Rhodesia. I slogged home through the snow in my modestins.

If you have the urge to make a trip like mine, let me offer some advice. Plan your innerary for half the time you actually allow yourself. Then you will be able to take leisurely side trips.

Learn as much as you can about the areas beforehand from books and by talking to people who have been there. The best maps are Bartholomew's and Michelin. The most important items in your rucksack will be your canteen, sewing kit. Boy Scout knife and first-aid kit. A sleeping bag made of a sewn-up sheet will give you clean, lightweight comfort.

Don't take containers: wrap breakable items in clothing. Things I took and later got rid of included a mirror, cooking gear, books and emergency rations. If you have any doubts about your day-to-day need for an item, don't take it, you'll find it when you need it. Keep clean-shaven for the sake of making good impressions and for your own morale.

In some localities I found people suspicious of me because some rucksark-toing hitch-hiker had passed through before and had soured them with his arrogance and lack of manners. You must show all, be considerate and courteous. If a friendly, open attitude doesn't come naturally to you, upply 20.

Actually, it would be wise to carry more than $27. But for getting along on a shoestning, the cameraburgato plan is the best I know.

LAST LOOK: Winding up his 16,000-mile jount in Egypt, Melbin follows in the tracks of thousands of other tourists, views the Sphinx of Gizo.

Last year, when producer Samuel Goldwyn bought the screen rights to the Broadway smash hit, Guys and Dolls, he gave the top price ever paid for a film property: $1,000,000. The production has been pretty unorthodox ever since.

First, Goldwyn signed Joseph L. Mankiewicz, a four-time Academy Award winner who never had handled a musical comedy, to write the screenplay and direct Guys and Dolls.

Then, for the romantic leads, he hired Marlon Brando (at $200,000), who never had sung or danced professionally, and Jean Simmons (at $100,000), a British-born dramatic actress. Marlon was cast as gambler Sky Masterson, so named in the picture because of his willingness to bet on anything; Jean got the role of Sgt. Sarah Brown of the Save-a-Soul Mission, young, pretty and dedicated to her work. Goldwyn further announced that both stars would do their own singing. Said Brando:

"My voice sounds like the mating call of a dying yak, but if Mr. Goldwyn has the gall to put it on the screen I'm willing to try it."

For three months thereafter, Marlon studied under Leon Cepparo, the vocal coach who had instructed him for his Shakespeare debut in Julius Caesar. As a result, moviegoers will be pleasantly surprised by Brando's rich baritone in his principal number, Luck Be a Ludy Tonight.

Although Marlon long has been known as "a difficult character" in Hollywood, he balked at just one thing in Guys and Dolls: fan-magazine stories or pictures. Otherwise, nothing - script, direction, rehearsals, other actors --- seemed to bother him. "Throughout the entire production," Mankiewicz asserts, "Marlon was an angel."

Others who admired Brando were the normally skeptical backstage crew. "He was extremely considerate of everyone's feelings," one electrician told me. "He never pulled rank."

Unfortunately, this was not always true of Frank Sinatra. As Nathan Detroit, a gambler whose projected marriage to Miss Adelaide (Vivian Blaine) has been deferred 14 years by his prior loyalty to his floating crap game, Sinatra gives a standout performance in Guys and Dolls. But Frank is a born scrapper. Once he believes right is on his side, he will take on anyone or anything. During the course of this production he took on two formidable foes, Sam Goldwyn and television's famous emcec, Ed Sullivan.

It began with Sullivan's shrewd attempt to procure for his TV show a half-hour preview of Guys and Dolls. Sullivan offered Goldwyn $32,000, hoping no doubt that Sam would prevail on the film's stars to contribute their talents in the spirit of sales promotion.

When Sinatra heard of this, he reacted violently: Sulfivan, he claimed, had "tried to put pressure on top studio officials to get me to appear for free on Toast of the Town. ...1 get $25,000 for a personal appearance, and Sullivan offered only $32,000 for the entire package."

THE STORY OF 'GUYS AND DOLLS'

Based on characters and a story by the late Damon Runyon, the picture closely follows the tremendously successful stage musical of the same title. The scene is New York. Gambler Nathan Detroit is engaged to Miss Adelaide, a night-club dancer who greatly wishes to be married but objects to Nathan's running a floating crap game. To get money for a place to hold the game, Nathan bets another gambler, Sky Masterson, that he cannot persuade a pretty mission lassie, Sarah Brown, to go to Havana with him. Sky does it; then, having fallen in lave with Sarah, denies his success and pays off on his bet. Despite complications, everything works out and both couples get married at high noon in Times Square.

Sullivan promptly wrote to the Screen Actors Guild, saying that to date his show had paid out $5,000,000 to performers and that he had approached Goldwyn, not Sinatra, on the Guys and Dolls project. He also reprinted the entire letter in a paid trade-paper advertisement. Sinatra then rebutted with a full-page advertisement in Variety: "Dear Ed, You're sick, Frankie... P.S. Sick, sick, sick,"

Although this exchange of advertisements nettled practically all the top echelon concerned with the picture—and produced no TV preview— it had scant effect upon Sinatra's work. Vivian Blaine, the only top name retained from the original Broadway cast, says, "Frank was very easy to work with, largely because we established a kind of instantaneous rapport. It was the kind of thing I had with Sam Levene, who played the Nathan Detroit part in the stage show. And I never thought I'd find it again. But Frank is such a darn' good professional that it was a cinch working with him."

In the film Frank sings four numbers beautifully. Only one, Adelaide, is a solo. The others are Sue Me, which he sings with Vivian Blaine, and The Oldest Established and Guys and Dolls, sung with Stubby Kaye, Johnny Silver and a chorus.

WHAT'S 'DOLL' IN ARABIC?

Because the title Guys and Dolls means little or nothing to foreign moviegoers, Loew's International, which is distributing the film averseas, had to translate it into different languages. This created problems, particularly with the word "doll," which has more than one meaning even in English. Anyway, here's what came out:

In Germany, Guys and Dalls becomes Schwere Jungen — Leichte Maedchen, or Tough Guys — Light-hearted Girls.

In France: Blanches Colombes et Villains Messieurs, ar White Doves and Tough Guys.

In Spain: Ellos y Ellas, literally Hes and Shes.

In Arabic, the title reads This Woman is Mine; In Swedish, Angels of Broadway; in Siamese, Made for Each Other; and in Hebrew, The Boys and the Attractive, Easygoing Girls — a title, it is safe to say, that will fit no theater marquee in the world.

Altogether, there are 18 songs (by Frank Loesser) and dances (by Michael Kidd) in the film. All but three songs were in the original Broadway score. The newcomers are Pet Me, Poppa (which replaces A Bushel and a Peck), the abovementioned Adelaide and A Woman in Love, a duet by Brando and Simmons. Since the picture runs 234 hours, three good numbers were cut from the score: My Time of Day, More I Cannot Wish You and Marry the Man Today.

The most effective vocalist in the picture is Vivian Blaine, who vents her emotional frustration in two hilarious numbers: Take Back Your Mink and Adelaide's Lament.

A native of Newark, N. J., where she was christened Vivian Stapleton, the perky blonde has been an integral part of Guys and Dolls since it opened on Broadway five years ago. After 1,200 Broadway performances as Miss Adelaide, Vivian played the same part on the road and in London. When Sam Goldwyn caught the show abroad, he confided to his wife that Vivian was "the one member of the cast we've got to get." Result: she steals the

After the film's completion in Hollywood this past July, Vivian and two other original-cast members — Sam Levene and Bob Alda — joined forces again at the Royal Nevada Hotel in Las Vegas, where an abbreviated version of Guys and Dolls currently is playing to the tourists and week-end gamblers. Meanwhile the picture will be opening soon in New York and Chicago, then around the country. From all appearances, it will return producer Goldwyn's investment — about $5,500,000 altogether — with interest.

New Life for Old

Teamwork in Portland, Me., stops

PORTLAND, ME.

Just south of this city's bustling business district, long-time residents now paint their picket fences and putter in flower beds with undisguised neighborhood pride. As recently as five years ago, no one bothered. But now, as the pictures at left show, yesterday's tumbledown houses rear straight and stalwart, gleaming in bright new paint, and a new spirit hangs over the 20-block neighborhood.

For this is the showcase of one of the nation's more vigorous campaigns to stamp out slums before they get started -- and an example worth copying in your city. Eye-catching as they are, the splashes of new paint are only frosting on the cake. The more drastic changes --- stout new stairways, modern fixtures, an almost hygienic cleanliness - lie be-

COUNCILWOMAN Ruth Walch: "On the Citizens' Housing Committee, I saw conditions that shocked me. But now we're making progress—slow, but steady."

PASTOR Frederick H. Thompson: "A remarkable job has been done, but it has just begun. Now our city must do something to lift up the whole person."

HOME-OWNER John A. Moreshead: "I've lived in this area all my life and love it. But it's been slipping. I'm glad to see neighborhood people pitching in to help."

PUBLISHER Jean Gannett Williams: "Many papers fail to realize how much they can do to help. We will continue to keep the housing story alive in our paper."

Neighborhoods

hind those once-crumbling walls. The program's success can be measured only in terms of health, safety and community pride.

Portland's war on slums has been a community project, first to last. It began in 1948, when the Portland Press-Herald and Evening Express shocked local readers with vivid photos and stories of decay amounting almost to squalor. The papers' steady drumfire led to formation of a 14-member Citizens' Housing Committee. The group plumped strongly for a program of neighborhood face-lifting.

Then City Hall's young, aggressive team of Dr. Edward Colby, health director, and Gordon E. (Pete) Martin, housing supervisor, drafted a housing code with teeth and enforced it with vigor. But the final push needed to put the program across came from residents themselves. Within a week after the code was passed by the City Council, homeowners were streaming to Martin's office to find out how they could comply with it.

Just what is the owner's (or the tenant's) role? When his area is chosen for rehabilitation (the program began with six blocks, now covers 20), he is invited to a meeting of residents and city officials. Dr. Colby and Martin outline the inspection law, explain its rock-bottom standards, then urge property owners to ignore the minimums and renovate from top to bottom.

A few days after the meeting, Martin's inspectors invade the area armed with flashlights, detailed forms and an extra quantity of politeness. Since community cooperation is so important, the men are trained to inspect at the owner's convenience and to be as accommodating as possible. (Once, a home-owner refused to admit an inspector until he sang an Irish song. The inspector obliged with I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen.) The house is combed from foundation to attic, with particular attention to structure, sanitation and ventilation.

Later, an owner may receive an official okay --- or an order telling him to repair anything from a crack in the wall to a sewage system. If he fails to comply, the city is empowered to take him to court, or even to shutter the building as unfit for occupancy.

But most owners are eager to fall in line. Sometimes, when repairs are expensive, Martin's agreeable men allow owners to spread the work over a long period. Occasionally they run afoul of an independent cuss who refuses to be told to remodel; he complies with the law and then does a thorough job a year or so later — just to show it's his own idea.

How can your city band together to stamp out the glacierlike creep of slums? Here and there, cities already have chalked up success with programs of "urban renewal"; and a national organization, ACTION (American Council To Improve Our Neightorhoods, Box 462, Radio City Station, New York 20, N.Y.), staads ready, with information and trained consultants, to help your city get started. For as Portland has learned, the battle against decay benefits everyone. The results are counted in reduced disease, reduced delinquency and a shot-in-the-arm for civic self-respect.

Ever since they were born, the teen-aged daredevils in these pictures have been circus minded. Here in the winter quarters of "The Greatest Show on Earth," they rub elbows with aerialists and animal trainers every day.

So when Bill Rutland-then athletic director at Sarasota High School-first dreamed up a student circus six years ago, the idea went over with a bang. The first show was held indoors, on a borrowed $600 and hand-medown equipment. Since then, the circus has prospered, now owns all its own rigging, ponies, concession stands, even shows a profit of more than $3,000 a year.

Surprisingly, only a handful (three this year) of performers come from circus families. But the circus is a big thing to these kids; one girl's family moved here from Montgomery, Ala., just so she could perform in an aerial act. And students still talk about the time a football star told the coach he was quitting. He said football practice was interfering with his circus work.

AMERICAN FAMILIES IN A BOOM YEAR-No. 4

DYNAMIC TEXAN Barney Holland poses on his office terrace. He designed the office building himself.

ONE MILLIONAIRE'S FAMILY:

FORT WORTH, TEX.

Barney Holland, the balding, blocky Texan above, could be called a symbol of the flush postwar years. He returned here from the Navy in 1946 with $4,000 saved; since then, he has pyramided his net worth to well over a million dollars, mostly in oil, trucks, tires and ranch land.

Barney is 35 and the archetype of the new millionaire, the modern Midas whose golden touch consists of an unshakable belief that the boom will go right on booming. (Barney's own opby SID ROSS and ED KIESTER timism runs so deep that he once owed $70,000 on a $300-a-month salary.) With the economy at new heights in 1955, Barney and his breed of new tycoon are enjoying the best year on their books and see no reason to hedge their bets

Aside from this resemblance around the bank account, however, Barney looks blessed little like a millionaire, the muchcaricatured Texas species or any other. He doesn't flash his wealth; his income, for tax purposes, is limited rigidly to $25,000 a year. He doesn't bluster; he is simple and straightforward. He doesn't drive a Cadillac, preferring a 1950 Buick, and, although he owns a 2,000-acre ranch, he never rides a horse.

Nor is his home life pretentious. Priscilla, his pretty blonde wife, suffers along without a mink coat, and his four lively children (Lindsay, 8; Barney, 6; Joe, 4; Ellen, 2½) romp around a green-shuttered $20,000 house which, while comfortable enough, is hardly luxurious. A millionaire who computes the cost of a washer may sound like a nickelnurser, but what this really reflects is an unbounded capacity for study, which Barney turns loose on every project, from the purchase of a washer to the sale of 200,000 gallons of gasoline. His favorite reading consists of economics, finance and banking textbooks. Two or three evenings a week, he pulls out an armchair study board, a souvenir of his days at Princeton, and covers yards of paper with figures on business deals. His knowledge of the tax laws, for example, would do credit to T. Coleman Andrews, Mr. Income Tax himself. In Barney's realm, nothing is left to chance.

Around Fort Worth, Barney has somewhat the reputation of a reckless plunger. He considers this unfair. "What nobody ever sees is the amount of work I do over this study board," he says. "I figure every angle and stack all the facts and figures in the back of my head. When I'm set for something, it may seem hazardous to them, but not to me.'

bridled optimism, Barney has built up a small but substantial empire, most of it interlocking. His biggest firm, the Barney Holland Oil Co., wholesales Conoco gasoline, oil and accessories; its best customers are the 50-odd service stations Barney himself controls. (The company also owns a number of business properties, mostly leased out to automobile dealers.)

This gasoline is transported from a Holland-owned depot to Holland-owned stations via Holland-owned trucks of the Heart of Texas Trucking Co. (The arrangement sprang from Barney's homework: by paying Heart of Texas twice the going rate for transportation, Barney Holland Oil keeps out of a higher income-tax bracket — and the money comes back to the same place.) Likewise, the Holland chain of service stations buys tires from the Barney Holland Tire Co.

Then there are the lesser satellites—the Triangle Transport Co., another trucking firm, and Westport, Inc., a real-estate outfit in which Barney owns a one-fifth interest. He also owns some $15,000 in bank stock — "although I like to keep control of my own money" — and keeps as a kind of cushion some $3,500 in sound mining stock, which his mother bought for him with his Navy pay.

In Barney's eye, the Lick Skillet Ranch at Idahel, Okla., in the Red River Valley, crowns his galaxy. Once, Barney considered ranching for a living: today, what salary he draws above his $25,000 (the trucking firm pays him a token $125 a month, the tire firm nothing) is siphoned into the ranch. Barney is building up his herds of Black Angus cattle (he now has 300 head) and plans to add sheep. Judging by land prices in the neighborhood, the ranch alone is worth roughly $1,000,000.

But the Lick Skillet is more than an investment: it wraps up business, pleasure and future. Barney, still hard at work and busier than millionaires who live on their dividends, uses the ranch as a retreat (it has neither radio nor telephone); the kids consider it almost a fairyland. Barney fishes, hunts, walks around surveying his land and thinks out business problems without pressure. Often he fills the house with guests — many of them his employes, for he believes in sharing his fortune with them.

Barney tries hard to build up an esprit

de corps among his workers. "I know very well that I get more loyalty if they have a stake in the profits," he says. Part of this "profit-sharing" system is a substantial Christmas bonus. Barney also gives his men a chance to enter business for themselves. "That's the best pension plan I could give them," he declares.

Recently, one employe launched plans for a new shopping center — on land Barney found and bought for him. A service station in the center will buy Barney Holland Oil Co. products, and this is enough return for the boss.

It's not too many years since Barney himself was scraping by on $250 a month. True, his father (also named Barney) had an established business in the oil firm, but Barney started at the bottom as a truck driver and "general flunky." His first move after discharge was to marry Priscilla Bradford, a Smith College graduate whom he had met at Princeton on a football week end: they set up housekeeping in an $80-a-month garage apartment with some hand-medown furniture. The thing the Hollands remember best about those days was the way diet followed the day of the week -Tuesday was beans day, Wednesday spaghetti day and so on.

Barney immediately turned his searching mind loose on his dad's business. Within a year he had a sweeping plan for reorganization. It got a cold shoulder, to say the least. "It looked like here was Junior telling older people how to do things," Barney recalls. "They didn't welcome any outside static." His project was allowed to die quietly.

Thwarted there, Barney's restless mind looked elsewhere. In 1948 he dipped into his savings for $800 and bought a servicestation lease. He sold the inventory for $500, leased the station at a profit of $50 a month. Thus, for $300, he had upped his income $50 a month. A few months later he added a second station for $9,000. He borrowed $6,000 of the money; payments were $100, rent was $125, so he profited $25 more a month.

About this time, Priscilla objected. He was raiding the savings for highly speculative ventures, she felt, Barney marshaled his facts, took out his lap board and showed her mathematically that no risk was involved. She has been his convinced booster ever since.

His father was less easily swayed, so more and more Barney turned to private real-estate operations. He sold his house at a $10,000 profit, bought a farm, traded it as down payment on the ranch, added to his network of service stations. Finally, in 1949, he quit his father's business.

His career on his own lasted roughly three months. Then his father's business associate felt ill, and Barney was asked to come back, "I agreed on two conditions," Barney says. "One, that I be accepted as an equal, not a junior, and two, that my salary be limited to $300 a month. I didn't want to lean on anybody. I wanted to prove I had the goods."

Barney got more than equal status; his dad gave him a free hand. The old plan for reorganization was dusted off, brought up to date and put to work. After much consultation (and many nights over the study board), the company changed its status from Conoco's agent to an oil wholesaler handling Conoco products. The string of gas stations was expanded. More property was purchased. Rental income zoomed from $2,000 to $40,000 a year. Sales jumped from 200,000 to 400,000 gallons a month. By 1952, Barney had spent more than a quarter of a million dollars to expand.

Millionaire Barney is still spending and he is still a whirlwind, with little time for fun by everyday standards. "Today," Barney says, "Conoco sales in Fort Worth are the highest per capita of any large city in the U.S., and 75 per cent of these sales' are due to the Barney Holland Oil Co." In addition to quarterbacking this sales campaign, Barney has taken time out for such projects as designing a new office building for the company (on the strength of a year of architecture in college) and running for City Council as an independent. (He won a two-year term, and is busily heckling his fellow councilmen to spend more to improve the city.)

The Hollands have few evenings to spend over the chess board, one of their favorite recreations. Reading is another pet, but Barney has little time for the Book-of-theMonth Club. (The Hollands have separate libraries; Barney runs to economics texts and new fiction, Priscilla's to history and biography.)

Then there are the social demands. The Hollands move in the more rarefied circles of Fort Worth society. Barney springs from a revered Texas family: an ancestor was the legendary Col. James Bowie, and an uncle was Frank Hawks, the famed flier. who used to bring Will Rogers to dinner at the Holland home. ("I remember sitting on the bed listening to him tell stories," Barney says. "He was funny as hell.") Priscilla, with a Park Ave. and New Canaan, Conn., background, is likewise society-bred, and the Hollands are seen often in Fort Worth's best places - the River Crest Country Club, the Ridgley Club, the Colonial Club.

"We know everybody all right," Barney admits. He himself, however, is not much for socializing; though amiable enough, he has to be almost dragooned into dressing up. As a result, he often stays home with the study board while Priscilla goes to concerts or to the theater in Dallas with friends.

BARNEY WORKS over business accounts at home. He removes tie only on ranch (right)

game with mother in backyard.

Occasionally, the Hollands will hold a small, formal cocktail party, usually inviting seven to 10 couples --- hardly millionaire-type high living.

With Flora to handle the housework, Priscilla divides her days between the children and volunteer work. She is active in the League of Women Voters, the Junior League and the women's auxiliary of All Saints Episcopal Church. Summers, when Lindsay and Barney aren't in school, she shepherds the children to a swimming pool or the zoo in her Ford station wagon.

Barney shies away from bringing up the children, leaving it mostly to Priscilla, and confesses openly that he's "a little afraid" of them. "I like them when they're well-behaved," he says, "but otherwise they're kind of hard to take." Barney has never changed diapers or walked the floor with any of the children.

This is not due to a lack of devotion, by his standards, "When Priscilla takes the kids to Sunday School, and I lie in bed, don't think I'm asleep," he says. "I'm reading the want ads or figuring out some deal in my head. Sure, I could be playing with the kids—but what if I came up with cancer or something, then what am I doing for my kids?"

Family affairs are marked "hers," just as business is marked "his." Priscilla gets an allowance of $750 a month, which covers the mortgage payment ($107), the utilities ($70) and home maintenance and repairs ($46) as well as food ($215), clothing ($81) and entertainment ($58). What's left usually goes into the family savings account, although Priscilla sometimes takes a flier in business herself. She owns a gasoline truck in her own name — and rents it to Heart of Texas Trucking Co.

Barney's one extravagance is antique collecting he has a closet full of Dresden and Meissen china and the walls are sprinkled with Currier & Ives prints. Both enjoy travel, but since Barney doesn't like to be away from the office for more than three or four days, their trips are limited to short hops to Mexico or New Orleans. Most of their leisure is spent at the ranch.

Barney has extensive plans for the ranch. For one thing, he hopes to initiate an "assembly line" steer-feeding system, under which cattlemen would send him steers to be fed and then pay him a fee for the weight they have gained. He also plans to begin raising sheep. And his companies are not marking time, either.

"Maybe I'll make five million or 10 million, I don't know," Barney says. "Whatever it is, money is just a by-product. I'm having fun in what I'm doing — the way other people play bridge. Opportunity is still very much alive in this country. I've got a lot of hope for the future."

Priscilla also has hope for the future. "I'd like to build a new house and have more things and live with a little more dash and give better parties and do more things socially," she says. "I want the children to have the finest education possible and get a good start in life. But I won't push Barney to get any of these things."

Barney, of course, is a man who needs no pushing. Plans already are in motion for the house: the Hollands own a two-acre tract on a bluff overlooking the Trinity River. The Hollands will build their Early American dream house after the children get a little older and after they sell their present home — "at a profit, of course."

The Hollands speak of tomorrow as though it were already here — as well it might be. Barney's optimism has never let him down before, and he sees not a chance that it will in the future. In his view, the boom will go snowballing on and on, and he is willing to back up his belief with dollars and cents. He and his kind of new millionaire have eashed in most on postwar prosperity. They also are among those who made it possible.

ONE GIRL'S PROBLEM: Watch TV or go out on a date?

Advice to Teenagers

About half of the letters I receive from readers request personal answers. This is impossible, but I will reply to as many as I can in this column.

Q. I am a boy of 17, a senior in high school. My problem is this: My parents are so oldfashioned that they make me stay at home every night of the week. My mother says I may start seeing girls when I reach 25.-K. L., Middlesboro, Ky.

A. Your parents are not being realistic. It is perfectly normal for a boy of 17 to want to date, and parents who try to stop this natural process usually find that their children deceive them in the matter. Perhaps some older member of your family, your clergyman or teacher could talk to your parents tactfully about it.

Q. I am 14 and I like boys, but I like TV, too. I do not know whether to go out on dates or watch TV. - M. M., Knoxville, Tenn.

A. While there is any doubt about it, better watch TV.

Q. There is a boy in my community who continually asks to date me, even though I refuse him each time. He is a nice boy, and I wouldn't want to lose him as a friend by hurting his feelings. How can I make him understand? Also, my face turns red when anyone tells me I'm pretty. Please tell me how to overcome this shyness. -- C. S., Greenville, S. C.

A. It is always a girl's privilege to refuse to go out with a boy, and she need not make claborate excuses. Perhaps you are not really being firm enough with this boy, since you are worried about losing him as a friend.

Perhaps if you accept the fact that you are pretty and attractive, you will also accept the compliments that go with it. Express your thanks modestly and try, to return the compliment at a suitable moment.

Q. I like a boy who likes me but we live quite a distance from each other. Could I ask him to write? - B. J. C., Syracuse, N. Y.

A. Yes, you may ask him to write, and it would be polite of him to say that he will even if he knows in his heart that he may never get around to it. If he's honest, you may get this kind of answer: "I'd like to write and I'll try. But you know how it is -- there's homework and sports. But if you don't hear, it won't be because I'm not thinking of you."

Q. There is a bay of 17 here who is very conceited. All he does is talk about himself. Is there any way to break up his conversation? — A. B., Medford, Mass.

A. Often, the boy who acts this way is secretly concerned about himself. He may think he's too short or too tall, too homely or too slow to compete on a normal level with other boys. Give him what approval you can for the things he does well and perhaps it will help him to overcome this fault.

Q. I am soon to be 14. My mother and father will not let me run in the streets till all hours of the night like the rest of the kids, and they make fun of me because of that. In fact, if I do anything my friends don't like, they tell me about it or give me the impression I am not wanted. - S. D., Muncy, Pa.

A. Very often the girl or boy who is teased a lot, somehow needs the teasing and does things to incite it. See if that isn't so in your case. And try not to be too sensitive. Some people know that they should not be sharply critical of others, but at your age it's natural to speak out when their contemporaries do something that they don't approve of. You're probably the same way.

In any case, I can sense from your letter that you are not really displeased that your parents won't let you run in the streets until all hours of the night.

FOR THE FIRST TIME! DOCTORS FIND EFFECTIVE TREATMENT FOR

Broken, Splitting Fingernails

Medical journal reports 7 out of 10 women improved fragile "impossible to manicure" nails by adding KNOX Gelatine to their daily diet!

At last, here is help for the many women who are ashamed of their hands because of unattractive, fragile fingernails! Read these important findings reported in a leading medical journal:

In a recent research project, doctors gave Knox Gelatine to a group of housewives who for some time (in many cases, years) had been annoyed with broken, splitting, chipping nails.

In all cases definite improvement occurred in one month. In three months 7 out of 10 of the women noted that their nails had stopped splitting and could be manicured to a full point!

Fingernails like those referred to above often reflect underlying health conditions such as a lack of some of the important food ele-ments in your diet. Research has proved that Knox Gelatine con-tains the necessary elements to keep fingernails strong and healthy. Do as many people do who take Knox every day . . . simply mix an enve-lope of Knox Unflavored Gelatine in water, your favorite fruit juice or bouillon. Complete directions in every package.

Power in a Pretty Package

By Tedd Thomey

A ROUND THE COURTS they refer to her as the atomic cannon of world tennis.

Sometimes she whacks the ball so hard the spectators stand back in alarm, half expecting to see a nuclear mushroom cloud rise from the devastated spot where that white blur just hit.

Long Beach's Beverly Baker Fleitz knocks the wool from a tennis ball with such case you'd expect her to be six feet tall and weigh 185 pounds.

You'd expect her to have arm muscles like Rocky Marciano and the bulgy thighs of Crazy Legs Hirsch.

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Mrs. Beverly Baker Fleitz is not only the most powerful feminine tennis player in the world today – she's also the prettiest. Beverly's figure is so perfect she turns half the starlets in Hollywood chartreuse with envy.

SHE IS SMALL (only 5 feet 4 inches tall) and weights 117 pounds. She has the measurements of a Miss Universe condidate (34, 21, 35, reading from top to boiltom), and when she sashays onto a court in one of her 25 fancy tennis frocks that sudden sound you hear in the spectators' section is not necessarily applause.

It may well be the increased pressure of a thousand male heartbeats.

The answer lies, in part, to the fact that Beverly is ambidextrous.

THE KEY WEAKNESS of most tennis players is in their backhand.

Mrs. Fleitz has no such weakness because she has no backhand,

She has two of the biggest, strongest forehands in world tennis. This makes her absolutely unique among the world's top feminine players.

When she wants to hit a ball on her right side, she clobbers it with the racket in her right hand.

When she wants to hit a ball on her left (the backhand) side, she merely shifts the racket casily to her left hand—and, whammo! she scores another ace.

She is so versatile, however, that she can, when necessary, play a legitimate backhand. She often uses a backhand when making quick, hard volleys at the net, executing the stroke with the racket in her right hand.

MRS. FLEITZ has been playing tennis ambidextrously ever since she first picked up a racket at Santa Monica's Lincoln Park public courts. That was when she was a child of 11 and was coached by her father, Frank Baker, a Santa Monica recreation official.

Now 25 years old, she has in the intervening 14 years compiled this remarkable record;

1. She was runner-up in this year's Wimbledon, England, tournament, losing to Louise Brough in a tremendously hard fought, 7-5, 8-6 final that tennis experts said was one of the finest women's matches ever played on the famed center court. As a result she is ranked the No. 2 feminine tennis player in the world since the Wimbledon fournament is the "world series" of tennis, outranking even the U. S. Nationals.

2. She has won hundreds of trophies in state, national and international tournaments. She has enough trophies, gold, silver and bronze, to fill several rooms.

She was a member of the victorious U. S. Wightman Team of 1949, coming from far behind to whip her English opponent. (The Wightman competition is the feminine counterpart of the Davis Cup competition for men.)

4. In 1946, when she was a pert 16-year-old, she won the U. S. National Public Parks women's championship.

5. The next year, when she was an even perfer 17, she scored a terrific upset, winning the women's championship of the Pacific Southwest tournament in Los Angeles. She bowled over Pat Canning Todd 6-2, 6-3 in a fournament which annually is considered as important as the U.S. Nationals at Forest Hills. She won this championship for a second time last month, scoring a vengeful 6-1, 6-4 victory over Barbara Breit, a North Hollywood miss who upset Beverly at Forest Hills in August.

6. Last year at La Jolla she trounced Maureen Connolly, 6-3, 6-0, outpowering the powerful Little Mo in all departments. It was one of the worst beatings Miss Connolly ever suffered. (Little Mo, then the No. 1 world player, retired from competition shortly thereafter due to a leg injury. The two have not played since.)

THE LIST of Beverly's achievements goes on and on. In addition to winning countless state and sectional tournaments, she has won the women's championships of Germany, Ireland and Mexico (the latter twice). She has won all kinds of titles in women's doubles and in mixed doubles with her tall, handsome husband. In 1950, at Monte Carlo, she won the title of the "best junior tennis player in all

When a tennis star marries, her career usually goes into a decline. But it has been just the opposite with Beverly. In 1951 she married John Fleitz (former Long Beach City College tennis

Going to "hit the road" at night? Then wash your lace in cold water before you start. It's a trick that will help to "hypo" your night vision.

By Douglas Nelson Rhodes

A NEWLY-DISCOVERED way to stimulate better night vision is to wash your face and hands thoroughly in cold water before venturing forth into the dark. This is the advice of Edwin D. Fletcher, special examiner in charge of research for the California State Drivers' License Division, whose research showed that the cold water treatment may thereby materially improve your nighttime safe driving record.

Fletcher and the Drivers' Li-ducted experiments in the hope 000 motorists suffer from sub-of turning up some solution to west's ever-climbing accident rate, especially among night drivers in California. The survey showed that nearly 2,500,-000 of the state's nearly 6.500 .-

normal nocturnal vision, which includes poor glare resistanceanother driving hazard that may be ameliorated to an extent by following the cold water treat-

The researchers do not claim that washing in cold water will automatically give owl-eyes to motorists, however. They suggest that it is merely one of the tricks which science has discovered to "hypo" the senses in the human system after the eyesight has become acclimated to brighter hours of daylight. The treatment was developed while scientists were delving into the problems of overcoming headlight glare. It is admitted, though, that the surface has barely been scratched in this phase of optical research. Experiments are being continued along the lines indicated by the initial successes.

AFTER A STATEWIDE series of visual tests made on California drivers examiner Fletcher found that 10 per cent of those examined-and who have 20-20 vision (accorded as perfect in daylight had subnormal sight ability after twilight. His find-ings are being used in a campaign to make California the first state to require rigid night driving examinations as a standard qualification for drivers' li-

What accounts for efficient and inefficient night vision?

Scientists explain it is a matter of how much "visual purple" the human system can manufacture within a given period, Visual purple is a chemical pigment in the optic organ which allows the eye to see the image which light brings to it from the outside. Owls and other birds and animals with high reputations for nocturnal vision have an abundance of this pigment and their systems are geared naturally to the manufacture in quantity. Exposure of the eye to light, however, uses up or bleaches the pigment with varying degrees of rapidity, depending upon the species of animals. In human beings the bleaching is a relatively fast process.

VISUAL PURPLE is found in the retina, the eye's sensitive covering. The retina has two kinds of cells, called "reds" and "cones." Cones are in the center of the retina and rods are on the edge. Both cones and rods funcedge. Both conversions to in daylight but rods are loss rensitive to light. They do their best work at night and are often spoken of as "night eyes."

Primary cause of many motor accidents after dark. Fletcher found, is difficulty of the eyes to adjust from daylight to darkness within the short span of the twilight period. Adjustment of the eyes from light to dark is slower than the adaptation from dark to light. Therefore, though driver's vision normally compensates itself fairly quickly to overcome discomfort of sudden bright lights coming out of darkness-such as a pair of headlights on the road ahead—the following few seconds are crucial ones from the vision standpoint. The eyes must, in turn, accustom themselves to the dark again, and this reverse process takes much longer. Research discloses that the built minute or so following the possing of two brightly lighted ears is the period of greatest dereer because rods in the retire are temporarily insensitive until such time as the chemical process s of the drivers' systems reader steel the visual purple supply.

FLETCHER, who has been studying noctoreal vision prob-Iems for more than a decade and who has examined thousands of drivers, offers these tips to night drivers:

- (1). Wash your face and hands for several minutes in cold water before undertaking a motor trip.
- (2). Breathe deeply and flex your muscles at regular intervals to increase stimulation of other
- (3). Use your car's sun visor to deflect gleam of oncoming headlights.
- (4). When glare strikes, adopt the trick which exprienced truck drivers use that of looking intently at the right side of the road after first taking a quick look into the darkness ahead.
- (5). If you are on a highway equipped with a painted center line use the line as you would sight along a straight edge or ruler and drive parallel to it.
- (6). Wear sum glasses during the brightest part of the day to slow down the bleaching process of your visual purple.

If the highway looks like this to you at night, your night vision is nearly perfect. Recent survey in California shows 21/2 million of state's 61/2 million drivers have poor night vision.

HOLLYWOOD

Kisses of Fire

Kisses are standard equipment in Hollywod movie making, but some of them singed the celluloid in unforgettable fashion . . . and Filmdom's guys and dolls are still at it. At the turn of the century, the first "shocker" smoked up the screen in a featurette called "The Kidd," in which May Irwin and John C. Rice filmed a version of their prolonged kiss from their stage play, "The Widow Jones." Movie fans have been smooth conscious ever since. Now kissing is bigger and better on wide screen, Canemascope and VistaVision, Here are a few good scorchers.

The Arizona sun was cool compared to Jane Russell and Jeff Chandler when they started romancing in U-I's recent release, "Foxiire."

Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in M-G-M's "Flesh and the Devil." Need more be said? Only the director and cameraman were allowed to peek.

Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh generated sparks with this "Gone With the Wind" closeup clincher. Atlanta wasn't the only thing that burned,

And Jack Palance and Barbara Rush become torrid romancers in new U-I film, "Kiss of Fire." He's athletic; leaves 'em limp, and bruised.

Photographer Bert Kopperi works successfully at his trade despite paralysis of much of his body.

Wneelchair Explorer

By Nelson Douglas

Sherman Oaks professional photographer, gets to more unusual places and manages to have a more adventurous life in a wheelchair than most people who move about in more normal fashion.

Paralyzed from the waist down and with only 30 per cent use of his arms, the indomitable Kopperi nevertheless has taken himself and his specially outfitted wheelchair, with camera attached, into many remote places on the globe — and carned his own way each time.

In Egypt, his was the first wheelchair ever to be mounted on a camel's back.

"THEY SAID it was no use to try, that the camel would never stand for such indignity," Kopperi recalls. "But I'm a guy who has learned that anything—even a cantankerous camel—can be underestimated as to ability and willingness to adapt to new conditions. Well, that mangy old humpback never gave me a bit of trouble. I'll bet he's still bragging to the other camels about him being the only wheel-chair taxi in Egypt!"

Kopperi is familiar with the ways of animals. One of his professional specialties is the photographing of hard-to-get subjects such as insects, dogs, eats, horses and other fauma.

Unusual camera angles of scenery and candid news shots are all in the day's work for him. When he wants photos of bees at work, for instance, he puts on the necessary protective gear and moves in on them in his conveyance. He's the first wheel-chair photographer to be accordited to work in movie studies, too, and does portraits of top stars.

A FORMER Army captain, Kopperi contracted polic during World War II while serving in the Philippines. After his discharge, he resolved to resume his prewar career as a commercial photographer, despite his handicap.

"I admit I was a bit doubtful at first," he grins, "latt I remembered an epigram, attributed to Henry Ford, which had once made an impression on me, Mr. Ford was quoted as saying: 'Whatever a man has, he must either use or lose.' Well, I had acquired a lot of experience as a professional photographer and I didn't want to lose it. So, I took up just where I left off when I joined the Army. And now I don't feel handicapped at all!"

Devising special attachments to hold his camera to the wheel-chair, Kopperi embarked on a 25,000-mile, world-girdling, picture-taking cruise simply to prove to himself that he could do it.

IN A HIGHLY successful trip, he covered South America, Africa, Central Europe and the Mediterranean countries. In Greece, he was the first person to reach the top of the Acropolis on wheels; in Venice, he toured and photographed the canals with his chair tasked to a rubber raft towed behind a gondala.

Now, the wheelchair explorer is looking forward to going to Australia. Japan and India, and maybe even get a few shots of the Himalayas. Anyone who knows Kopperi would know better than to lay odds that he won't scale Mount Everest in his hand-propelled chariot but they would bet that he probably can do it if he tries!

She puts her family responsibilities first, refusing to make the glamorous rounds of the various national tennis circuits in order to remain at home and give her daughter a proper upbring-When she can spare an hour or so from her housewifely duties she slips out to the Lakewood Tennis Club, keeping in trim by playing some of the city's top male players. (She beats most of them, too.)

THIS YEAR, photogenic Beverly has received more national publicity than ever before in her Thanks to her terrific play life. at Wimbledon, she was the darling of the tournament and sportswriters sent millions of words about her to the far corners of the world. She has been photographed from every conceivable angle in black and white and color, and her smile (it could be an advertisement for toothpaste) has graced the pages of scads of national magazines.

She was interviewed on network television by Jack Kramer during the recent Davis Cup matches. She has become such a celebrity in the tennis world that teenagers write to tennis magazines and ask: "Sirs, do you think it would help my game if I used both hands the way Bev-erly Baker Fleitz does?"

Her ability to use either hand provides a topic for endless chatter among Deveriy's friends. For example, she writes left-handed and sews left-handed, but bowls

WHAT HAS DEEN her greatest thrill so far in tennis?

She doesn't have to think twice before answering.

"The Wightman matches at Philadelphia in '49," she recalls quickly. "It wasn't just that I had to overcome deficits of 2-5, 2-5 to win my match against an English girl. The real thrill was the fact that each point I won was announced over the loudspeaker as be point for the United States."

Her plans for the future? "I haven't ear," she says. "I always let the future take care of itself."

You can be sure, however, that little Mrs. Power-Flytes (a nickname sluss picked up on the courts) won't be satisfied until she's had another go at Wimbledon and the U.S. Nationals.

And, judging by past performance, you can be certain she'll win one or both titles before long.

Family responsibility is first with Beverly, and here she is with daughter, Kim, 21/2, doing family shopping.

CALIFORNIA YESTERDAYS

Ugliest Baby Ever

By Helen Johnson

OST BABIES are cunning. regardless of color. The average person adores them, Their sweet, innocent ways, dim-pled bodies and eager little faces appeal to both sexes.

But 'way back in the late 1700s when the beautiful and glamorous Eulalia de Fages "reigned" in her humble adobe but as the first First Lady of California, a tiny, wrinkled haby lived. He was neither beautiful, innocent nor dimpled. In fact, he was ugly. So ugly that most people -- and even horses and mules — ran at the sight of him. His name was Rather a peculiar name for a baby. But it suited this one to perfection. For Chici was a monkey! A pet Capuchin mon-key owned by Eulalia's lady in waiting, Dona Augustias Mo-

There have been many pet monkeys down the years that followed Chici's life on earth, but rarely, if ever, one like Chici. His emotions ranked superior, as did his understanding. It is natural for any pet monkey to "give" his whole love to his master or mistress. Imagine then, the extent of Chici's unlimited contribution! True to his ancestry in another thing, he remained a "baby" for five or six years, and demanded the "mothering" only a person like Dona Augustias could give. For she was as different from the average person of her day as Chici was from the rest of his "tribe." Although Dona Augustias was a spinster, the motherly love she lavished upon the grimacing Chici was almost divine. She was a tall, thin female with squeaky joints and "dignified" mustachio - a real grenadier. Chici was a joy in her childless life,

Mexico to California's capital, when the governor's wife and her lady in waiting came to Monterey, proved a hard one on Baby Chici. But he lived through it. The first lady despised him and resented his presence in the governor's "mansion." But the But the Dona and Chici were inseparable. So Chici, like a spoiled child, usually had his way. Even some-times to sleeping on Junior Pedro's bed.

The climate of Montercy, however, was taking its toll on the tropie-born Chici. He lost weight. He even whined and cried like a human baby. The wrinkled, grimacing baby was slowly dying. Dona Augustias sensed it. grieved pathetically. She couldn't bear to see him die. So one day, in complete desperation, she appealed to the dignified Governor Fages to have him sent back to the tropics.

It so happened that Conde de La Perouse, a Frenchman on a world trip, made a brief stopover in Monterey. Out of pity for the distraught Dona Augustias, he consented to take Chici back to his earlier haunts. The parting between the baby monkey and his mistress was so pathetic that even the stern governor and his beautiful lady felt

History does not record how long Chici lived after his separation from Dona Augustias, But it does say the sailors had great sport with California's ugliest baby before they left him in the tropics to shift for himself and finally grow up!

His Plane 'Drives' Just Like an Auto

By Ted McKenna

PRIVATE PLANE designed to operate off land or water or be driven like an ordinary automobile—is being built in San Diego by a World War II Marine flier who was the first man to test the Navy's vertical takeoff plane in flight.

He is J. F. (Skeets) Coleman and he has incorporated some of the features of the vertical takeoff plane in the new combination aulo-plane.

Called the Aeromarine, the new craft has a delta wing of 43 degrees sweepback. Coleman became familiar with the delta wing's advantages as engineering test pilot for Convair's division of General Dynamics Corp., assigned to the vertical takeoff fighter, designated by the Navy XFY-1, but better known as the Pogo.

IN NOVEMBER, 1954, Colemon became the first human being to make a transitional flight from vertical takeoff to level flight and back down to a vertical "tail-sitting" landing in the Pogo. He was chosen the outstanding aviator of the year and awarded the 1955 Harmon International Trophy.

A 215-horsepower Franklin engine driving a pusher propeller mounted above the wing, aft of the cabin, will power the Aeromarine. It will have a range of 800 miles on 80 gallons of fuel and a top speed of 225 miles an hour.

Coleman says the 2,500-pound plane will be able to lift itself off after a run of only 800 feet. Landing speed will be 57 miles an hour.

WINGSPAN of the Aeromarine will be 25 feet and overall length 18 feet. For operation as an automobile, the wing will fold twice on each side, near the fuselage and just inboard of the twin vertical fins. As a car the width will be 65 inches.

"The primary consideration in the Aeromarine was to design a good airplane that could operate off land or water," Coleman says. "Adapting the plane to operation as a medium performance car was secondary. We were satisfield with a 50-mile-an-hour top speed on land because anything more might have interferred with its performance as a plane."

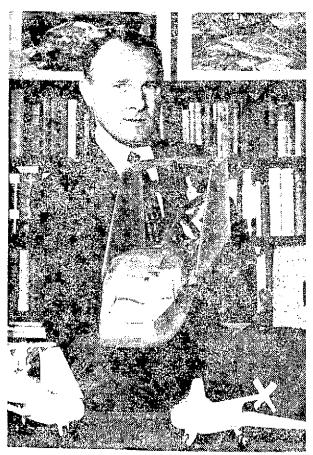

WATER LANDINGS and takeoffs will be made on a single, free-floating hydro-ski mounted underneath the plane's watertight hull. Coleman says. The ski, like the landing gear, will be fully retractable.

The plane was designed for extreme simplicity of operation in the air, since no good private airplane can be expected to survive if it is too complicated for the ordinary pilot to fly.

BECAUSE of the delta wing, the Acromarine also will have exceptional structural strength for a light airplane. Coleman says the wing is inherently stronger than other types, and folding is expected to be no mobilem.

The engine cooling fan and exhaust will combine in a closed system to suck air off the leading edge of the wing for high lift on takeoff and landing.

Coleman says he expects wide acceptance of the plane by industrial firms looking for a versatile executive aircraft. "We plan to concentrate on this market first," he said, "but the Aeronarine will appeal also to the weekend pilot who flies for pleasure or sport."

Hawaii Treasure

By Vera Williams

A PPROXIMATELY 92,000 lourists visited the Hawaiian Islands in 1954 — and 41 per cent of them were from California, says the Hawaii Visitors Burgan

"These visitors bring back memories of Hawaii's casual, restful way of life," say Mr. and Mrs. M. C. (Toby) Gaillard, 2744 E. Broadway, importers of Hawaiian hardwoods and furniture. "Many incorporate these ideas in their own homes and gardens."

The Gaillards, former Hawaii residents, are partial to tables made of monkey pod trees. The monkey pod tree is known by several other names — campano, samanea saman and rain tree, to name a few. It has distinctive and unusual grain patterns and colors that range from near white to dark walnut brown, chocolate brown and even almost black.

FINISHED TABLES are available or they have what are called free form table tops and finish-it-yourself materials. They recommend sealing and filling and five coats of clear lacquer.

"These tables aren't 'candied up,'" says Mrs. Gaillard. "They show the beautiful wood." The Gaillards "

The Gaillards also have finished and unfinished lamps and bases, also of monkey pod wood, and materials from which lamps may be cut. Salad bowls of beautiful free form, bookends and other items also are made from the beautifully grained hardwood.

The old Union Pacific horseshoe courts were located at Ocean Blvd. and Lime Avc., but progress ousted them and an enterprising restaurant took over. The time goes back to 1927 when the lot, owned by the Union Pacific Railway, was loaned without cost to a local group of horseshoe pitchers. Here the fa-miliar stakes of the horseshoe court popped up without embellishment of backstops, cement pitching stands or bleachers.

Early-day players recall that a shoe that missed the stake might well roll half a block. Winter rains quagmired the courts but left spirits undaunted; following a rain the club members would spend two or three hours digging out the soft mud from in front of the stakes and replacing it with dry dirt dug from solid earth behind the courts. Without pause the boys then settled down to the business at handhorseshoes.

DURING THIS PERIOD as many as eight members participated in club activities, despite an earth-shaking raise in club dues from 50 cents to a dollar in Abou 1936 the railway leased the land to the present holders, but allowed the club to move to railway property on the south-east corner of Broadway and Alamitos Ave. Here the club flourished until 1940 when, again it was "dispossessed" by the construction of a store at this corner. However, again, the Union Pacific, like the Great White Father shepherding its charges from reservation to reservation (though under no legal compellation) allowed the club to move to its present spot at First St. and Alamitos. Here it has remained in uninterrupted freerent tenure to this day and currently boasts about 125 duespaying members and eight of the best pitching courts in Southern California.

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the original club-Peter Cartwright, George Pasch and George Weihranch — still remain active in club pitching. Ten and 15-year "veterans" of club competition abound on the roster. A gold-trimmed typewriter, cash and a sea-cruise vacation are among prizes won by David Baker for essays. Literature came to him last year. By that time David had proved the adage that "Words are the tools of wisdom" and can earn their way when used with sagacity in conjunction with a fine, local library.

A 27-day vacation trip aboard a coast freighter was made possible by writing the winning 850 words about the U. S. Merchant Marine. Included was a prize of $50, with an extra $25 for spending money during his trip up the coast, touching Fort Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver and San Francisco. There were 28 contestants from all over the U. S. A.

Essay prizes, of course, are not the only rewards in competition. All the careful research David found necessary is an education. The trophies, war bonds and the solid cash have given him a practical answer to what an education can yield, now and in the future.

yen to try for the prizes in a contest? Especially an essay contest with a fopic like "What America Means to Me," in which one could put some good, positive convictions?

That is how David Ridenour Baker of 2126 E. 63rd St. figured when he began writing essays in the student contests. He was hardly 15 years old when he won a war bond in his first contest, which a local club sponsored.

Now turned 17, David has banked his seventh prize. This he won in a recent national contest, held by a typewriter company. More than 16,000 entered in the senior division. The $200 prize and the gold-trimmed typewriter he earned has pretty well convinced David that he will go on writing.

In the two short years that he has been writing essays, David won the sweepstakes prize for an essay on "What the Long Beach Shipyard Means to My Community." Several hundred students tried, but it was David who pocketed the $500 first award, plus a $50 school award.

BECAUSE well located lots in less wildlife and a little more Long Beach are getting scarce it behooves the prospective landowner to scrutinize closely any and every piece of land available. The possibilities inherent in many are not always obvious at first glance.

The lot that Mr. and Mrs. Vern W. Bengtson bought two years ago at 311 Roycroft was just such a diamond-in-therough, Situated in a good residential area, the lot nevertheless dampened the ardor of many real estate shoppers with a be-wildering tangle of weeds and rampant growth, and a small house in general "down-at-theheels" appearance.

IT WASN'T just exactly the Bengtsons' idea of a dream site, either, but a little speculation on what could be done with a little house intrigued them. So they plunged.

And for the past two years they lived in the little house which they enlarged and "enriched" to dollhouse specifica-

Only recently the family moved into a large and modern house they built on the front of the lot. But today's story is about the little house and how it "came into its own."

Two years ago it was one of the saddest small dwellings in town. Its modest 12x24-foot proportions were literally engulfed with eaves-high weeds that grew up and around years and years of accumulated rubbish banked up in back of the

Just as soon as the ink was dry on the deed to the property, the Bengtsons hauled away seven loads of junk to clear their new lot. Among other things, the chopping down of weeds and wild bushes revealed several trunks filled with jars and bottles-all empty-plus an old bathtub long since retired.

HOW THAT all this could accumulate on a lot in this choice location was a mystery, but the

Bengtsons never lost sight of the fact that their toil was worth while and would pay off.

As is the case with most old and neglected dwellings, the kitchen was an absolute horror. Laundry tubs of rough gray cement sufficed for everything from dishwashing to the Monday morning laundry. An antiquated cooler was trying to do refrigeration duties—not too successfully. And there was scarcely enough space for one person to move about in the rooms.

The bathroom was smaller still. A comical old bathtub stood on its ball-and-claw feet with an old hot water heater that hung precariously above it. There was no layatory.

All in all, it was with the barest minimum that Bengtson began the job of remodeling.

He added a 14x24-foot living and bedroom area. He paneled the interior with beautifully waxed knotty pine. A heavy supporting beam now spans the structure between the old and the new addition and over it handsome varnished rafters rise to meet at a height that adds an amazing feeling of spaciousness.

The floor is finished with asphalt tile, glossy and wonderfully practical. Large and airy windows have taken the place of the homely apertures Bengtson tore out. To the right of the front door, jalousy—or louver—windows add a modern feeling and efficiently usher in breezes to the kitchen area adjacent.

DIRECTLY OPPOSITE the front door is the pretty little kitchen that sets itself off from this point and from the living room by means of a curved serving bar of used brick topped with a gleaming birch counter.

Being one with the entry area and with the newly added and spacious living room the kitchen no longer seems "boxed in" and stuffy. And its modern innovations might well vie with any up-to-date preparation area, regardless of size.

Pale green vinyl tops the cabinet counters and surfaces the floor. The beautifully crafted birch cabinets are fitted with copper hardware that adds the right provincial touch to go with the mustard, brown and white medallion wallpaper. A clever hood, fashioned of scalloped birch, accommodates a ceiling fan that efficiently ventilates this open kitchen.

The pretty living room achieves much of its coziness and "farmhouse hospitality" through its proximity to the scenic little kitchen. Also greatly responsible for its abundant charm is the way its windows swing out to a yard which is densely endowed with established old trees that the house seems completely set apart from its neighbors.

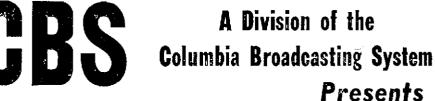

Deep green draperies dress the living room windows before which stands a floral-printed sofa. Flanking the sofa are two pine step tables with dropleaf extensions painstakingly made by Benglson. A small round dropleaf cocktail table stands in front of the sofa, still another example of his prowess as a furniture creator.

A DUTCH DOOR opens to the small bedroom made more spacious with the inclusion of storage trays built into the wall. Bengtson installed 10 drawers next to a wardrobe to eliminate space-consuming chest and dresser case pieces.

The pine paneling in the bedroom has been water-stained a pale green. Yellow cottage curtains hang at the bay window and complement the maple fourposter bed. A high, exposedbeam ceiling gives a feeling of airness to the room.

The redecorated bathroom has more footage and considerably more appeal than its forerunner. Black-and-white "doodles" cartoon wallpaper in combination with bright yellow floor and pullman cabinet add new charm. Outside, a spacious dressing room fitted with criling-high storage units is a luxury unknown to the former house.

The cottage's board and batten exterior siding is stained a sage green that contrasts nicely with the buttery-yellow trim. A red brick pathway leading to the front door expands generously at the side to provide a secluded and sun-bathed patio.

Art Gallery of a Globetrotter

Religious themes dominate much of the extensive collection of art reproduction assembled by Albert Floreani (above) in years as a travel guide.

By Ellen Saunders

ARE INDEED is the modern traveler who fails to show pictures to his stay-at-home friends. Albert Floreani, 125 S. Golden Ave., is no exception. Only his pictures are not the usual amateur color slides but the latest additions to his miniature art gallery, which contains hundreds of steel engravings, rare feather etchings, water colors and lithographic reproductions of some of the world's greatest paintings.

Building an art gallery has been Floreani's hobby ever since he left the ancient Swiss town of Solothurn as a restless 16-year-old to begin the 40-year career as a tourist guide and court interpreter which was to take him from the plains of Patagonia to the banks of the Nile, and twice around the world.

A RELIGIOUS MOTH is predominant among his lithographs which are representative of all the great schools of painting and include the works of Van Gogh, Rubens, Rembrandt, Whistler, and Sir Joshua Reynolds. Among them is Fra Filippo Lippi's famous 14th Century portrayal in color of the "Birth of Christ."

The religious motif reappears in 12 Japanese water colors which depict that country's version of the Nativity. And in a 24x30-inch steel engraving, "The Crucifixion," a 19th Century French artist's dramatic portrayal of Christ on the cross.

In sharp contrast to the somber shadings of "The Crucifixion" are the brilliant reds and yellows predominant in 100 reproductions of famous American Indian chiefs resplendent in their ceremonial robes.

FLOREANI HAS 200 steel engravings, each an autographed partrait of such famous 18th and 19th Century personalities as Longfellow, Thackeray, Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Jefferson, Franklin and Florence Nightingale.

Ten 130-year-old feather etchings of the Hudson River, examples of a lost art which flourished prior to Civit War days, are probably the most valuable pieces in Floreani's collection.

Aside from a few hundred colored postcards which reflect the heavily of the Alps both in summer and in winter, 20th Century art is represented only by two items. Yet these are among the most prized in Floreani's collection. One is a little known lithograph of Thomas Edison and Charles Steinmetz working together on a problem. The other, an autographed black-and-white crayon sketch of a famous countryman of Floreani—one with whom he used to correspond—Albert Einstein.

Treat 'Em, Don't Trick 'Em!

TOW DO YOU REACT to a knock on your front door on Halloween night, and five or six small figures dressed in fancy costumes pipe up, "Trick or treat!"? Do you give them a tasty handout accompanied by a big smile? Or do you refuse to answer the door because you think trick or treating is foolish nonsense?

Let's look at Halloween through the eyes of a youngster. So many wonderful things happen all at once; You put on a clever or funny or pretty or scary costume; you get to stay up late and go out on the mysterious dark street and knock on people's doors; you say the magic words, "Trick or treat!" and most people give you some candy or cookies or other goodies; you go to lots of houses and get lots of treats; then you take your big bag of loot home and spread it all out on the kitchen table to

With very little effort and a lot of good spirit, grownups, too, ean enjoy Halloween. Those who pull down the shades, put out the front room lights, and then hide in a back bedroom during the trick-or-treat hours, are themselves missing a big treat. There are some people who actually leave their homes for a few hours in order not to be bothered with small ghosts and witches at the It's very fortunate that these people are in the minority.

SOME PARENTS whose children have long since grown and left home often resent Ralloween and say, "Why should I be both-ered?" Perhaps these people are old long before their time, or maybe they've just forgotten what it's like to be young. If they would participate with the youngsters, Halloween would be a circus for all concerned. With more time on their hands than busy young mothers, they could prepare fancy treats that would mark their home as a favorite Halloween landmark.

Actually, the business of trick or treating helps discourage vandalism or minor mischievous pranks. When a group of young teenagers decides to trick-or-

It encourages a "get-even" attitude which may or may not have serious consequences. With the very small children it brings only nurt.

CHILDREN ARE so easy to please. Halloween treats can be plain or fancy. It's a good idea (and one appreciated by careful mothers) not to give loose popcorn or a handful of unwrapped candy. Here are a few treat suggestions:

A small Jullypop and a stick of gum.

A large orange follypop fied with a ribbon.

A cupcake frosted with orange icing and a raisin face.

A simple sugar cookie frosted like a cupcake.

If a little more time is available, fancier treats like these will receive a big "Gee, thanks!":

A "necklace" for each child made of peanuts in the shell. (String the peamits with a long needle and stout thread.)

A homemade popeom ball wrapped in an orange paper napkin and tied with a black ribbon.

An apple man with a marshmallow head and toothpick legs.

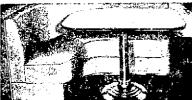

A SMALL ORANGE with a face made with raisins for eyes, red gumdrops for nose, jelly bean for mouth and marshmallow for hat - all stuck on with tooth-

The total cost of some of these treats can be as little as 50 cents. A small survey in a local neighborhood revealed that an average of about 30 children knock on a door in an evening. This may vary as much as a dozen each way. It would probably take less than an hour's time to fix a large tray of individually wrapped treats for the vonne visitars.

It's really no trick to be a happy freater, and it's a sure way to feel young in spirit for one big evening of the year!

The Foul and the Unspeakable

THIS IS NO sleepy-time-downsouth, nor is it a novel for the tender reader. Everything that is foul, beastly, unspeakable is spoken of here. But it speaks with such a voice as is seldom heard in fiction. "Andersonville" by MacKinlay Kantor (World, $5) is the Book of the Month Club selection for November, and the novel will be off to a jetimpelled start foward the top of the best-seller lists.

Every author, every novelist probably has one big one in him, and if they come any bigger than this, Kantor just has two heads. Any time a reader can continue through 760 pages of almost entirely unrelieved frightfulness, horror, brutality and suffering, minus the busty heroine and the daring hero standard to Civil War copy, he is reading a novel in upper case.

The story, if it can be so clari-fied and classified, begins in a pine forest in Georgia. Near it live the people of the South who are destined to be moved by the falling of the timber, the building of the stockade and the continuing presence within it of Yankee war prisoners. If it is possible to imagine the presence of 1,500 men to the square acre within that compound, the reader is off to a visit to the sights, sounds and smells that come with confinement. The swamp which becomes more and more filthy with the sorry wastes from the bodies of starving men; the deadline beyond which it was futal to step; the thieving and murder that went on within the prison, all these and some extra horrors made up Andersonville. The fault was hard to identify with any one man or group of men it was just an outgrowth of warfare, a hideous manifestation of what happens to man when he reverts to the animal. The reader will blame nobody, will sympathize with everybody, with even the unfortunate Henry Wirz who was hanged for the Andersonville horror after the war was over.

If there is any hope or promise for the stay from extinction of man by men, it comes in the ending of a superbly drawn history of the bitter breed of warriors, 50,000 of them, who went into the stockade at Andersonville -GARALD LAGARD.

ROY ROGERS was born Leonard Franklin Slye in Cincinnati on Nov. 5, 1911. And about his coming into the world his mother has but one regret: "If I had to cry because he was so ugly, why did I ever have to tell anybody?"

And then she adds, "Maybe that's one reason our boy always was so shy."

But shy or not, the "King of the Cowboys" has since been a shining light in the lives of his mother and father and children everywhere. The great turning point came after he was married to Dale Evans, "The Queen of the West," for with her help he found the miracle of faith.

The warm and glowing story of Roy's and Dale's lives, accenting their anchor of faith, is told by Elise Miller Davis in "The Answer Is God" (McGraw-Hill, $3.25). To get her story, Mrs. Miller lived with the Rogerses, traveled with them, until she had gone deep into their personal lives and accumulated a great wealth of material that came straight from their hearts — the stuff that will make "The Answer Is God" the best-seller it deserves to be.—F. T. K.

DO SENIORITY, chance, and family influence play really important roles in the final selection of a top executive? question is answered in "The Big Business Executive - the Factors That Made Him, 1900-1950" (Columbia University Press, $4). Author Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics at Vassar, analyzes the requisites of a top executive, how a person so filted moves up under his own steam and, finally, which of his qualifications are weighed most meticulously when he is chosen for the job .- F. T. K.

THE STORY of the five Eisenhower brothers is told in "The Great American Heritage" (Farrar, Straus & Cudahy, $5). The growth of the five lads into manhood, the spreading of their interests to take in most of the American scene, and the culmination of one of them into the nation's leader will affect almost any man whose generation is The strength of the nation is that of the strength represented by these five men. They might have achieved less, but they would be no less noteworthy as American citizens.--G. L.

ALREADY much published (he's been in a half-dozen books and he's on the comic pages of The Independent and the Sunday Independent, Press-Telegram), the indefatigable Pogo hreaks into print once more in "Potluck Pogo" (Simon and Schuster, paper, $1). In this one, Walt Kelly's 'possum and his little friends get in and out of all kinds of trouble, all of which is most amusing.

MEMORIES of Willa Cather's "The Lost Lady" and Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" are revived by "Dust Over the City," a prizewinning novel by Andre Langevin (Putnam, $3). It is the Canadian writer's first novel to appear in English.

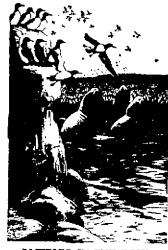

Dr. Alain Dubois, brilliant young doctor, brings his pretty bride Madeleine to the French-Canadian mining town of Macklin. Soon there is little between the couple except the hunger of the flesh, and Madeleine becomes tired and bored with the dusty town, her uneventful life, her husband lost in his profession, and Dr. Dubois finds her enmeshed in a torrid love affair with another man; he takes to drink. There is a tragic climax.

The writer has psychological insight, writing talent, and a beautiful economy of style that makes this one of the fine novels of the year.—V. W.

MURDER! — Barbara Frost's "Innocent Bystander" (Coward McCann, $2.75) offers murder in Gotham with a dash of romance; Beverly Nichols' "The Moonflower Mystery" is homicide with both British and ethereal touches (Guilt Edged, $2.75). Murder outs quite satisfactorily in both.

WILD AMERICA — Not even Audubon in all his lifetime covered as much of the North American wilderness as did Roger Tory Peterson and James Fisher who, in 100 adventurous days, traveled from Newfoundland to Mexico and back to Alaska. The result is "Wild America" (Houghton Mifflin, $5), ideal Christmas giving to nature lovers.

AMERICA IN THE RAW

THE BAD AND BEAUTIFUL: A compilation, such as "The New Pocket Anthology of American Verse," edited by Oscar Williams (World, $3.50), that publishes 20 splendid poems by Robert Frost and many pages of Millay and Robinson, though 14 wasteful pages of Oscar Williams' rambling verses, vulgar pieces by Ezra Pound and prosy utterances of William Carlos Williams are included, is still a bargain. The best of the younger contributors is Richard Eberhart, the least successful Hy Sobiloff in this bad and beautiful collection compiled by an egocentric anthologist who plays safe, feeling assured of a reading public by giving us Robert Frost and other legitimate authors, while being idiosyncratic as he includes the hollow sounds of the anti-poets. This, fortu-nately for the public, is the book of Robert Frost who guarantees the readers their money's worth. -J. J. K.

WITH A TWIST of the wrist, the amateur movie maker can now shoot his scene with a standard lens, reach out for a wide-angle view, or pinpoint it telephoto fashion---without focusing or resetting for exposure.

This new concept in movie making is made possible with the introduction of Kadak's Brownie Movie Camera, Turret f/1.9. Equipped with a single 13m. f/1.9 lens, fixed focus, within the camera, it features a three position turret which houses a 24-mm, telephonto converter, 9mm. wile-angle converter and lens barrel for the standard lens. Thus the camera has the effectiveness of three lensesstandard, telephoto and wide-angle, all f/1.9. It switches from one view to the other simply by pulling out the turnet and rotating it until the desired barrel is in front of the lens.

A NEW FILM is on the market here. It is Eastman Kodak's new Kodachrome film in 35-mm. and 828 sizes. The film, known as Type F, is color balanced for clear, wire-filled flashlamps without the use of a filter. It re-places Type A film, which was color balanced for use with standard photoflood lamps. This change to the Type F color balance stems from the fact that clear flash lamps such as the No. 5 and 25 (or Class M) are now the most popular sources of artificial light among amateur photographers. Thus the new Type F film will simplify color flash photography by eliminating the need for the color correcting fil-

by nurserymen. This ornamental is more familiarly known as "breath of heaven" which is an apt description. Two varieties are available; alba, which produces white-toned flowers purpurea which develops blooms of a purple-pink tinge. The plant has somewhat the appearance of \boldsymbol{n} heath and demands a spot out in the sun, Rubbing the leaves together causes the fragrance to be more pronounced.

For a clean fragrance that will remind you of the great outdoors choose libocedrus decurrens. This is a California native and as such is sure to succeed in your garden. It has what is known as a "woodsy smell;" it is like bring-ing the mountains to your garden. This incense cedar is well adapted for the average landscape, being neither too large nor too small. At maturity the tree should approximate a height of from forty to fifty feet.

LIBOCEDRUS DECURRENS is somewhat on the formal side and this characteristic should be kept in mind relative to its surroundings. The tree has a stately shape and is well proportioned. The foliage is dense, the tree being quite full in the center. It assumes a pyramidal type of growth. The aromatic quality should aid in wiping out gasoline fumes that may waft into your garden from the street.

A somewhat taller tree is oucalyptus citriodora, so named because of its lemon-like scent. This specimen grows to around seventy feet and gets there rather rapidly. One distinguishing mark of the encalyptus citriodora is its white trunk that, because of the smoothness of the surface, appears to be polished. The leaves which are slender in shape have the exact pungency of a lemon.

Myrtus communis, the myrtle of Roman times and well known throughout the pages of history, is one of Southern California's most popular hedge plants; and deservedly so. The foliage, is shiny in appearance and highly aromatic; the small white flowers give way in early spring to black berries.

FOR HEDGE PURPOSES you have a choice of two excellent myrtles: the common type is the large-growing specimen, going from four to eight feet. Variety compacta, which in late years has become increasingly more popular, ranges from three to six feet. Both varieties are hardy down to lifteen degrees and tolerate a great deal of pruning.

SOLUTION TO TODAY'S PUZZLE

Many shrubs lend fragrance to the garden. Juniper is one, giving off fresh, pungent,

This allows you to shape the plant as you wish. These myrtles also perform well as specimen plants. They require very little ornamental. Housewives who take their cooking, or seasoning, seriously are well acquainted with the magic powers of the leaves of a sage plant. It is a perennial and will continue on in your garden for many years. The blooms which appear in racemes are purple, blue and white, Famed hybridizer of camellias, Koseku Sawada, works Alabama nursery, pollinating a new variety.

By Adria Allen Aldrich

SEKU SAWADA is one of the world's famous hybridizers of the camellia and over his many years of work has developed 26 new varieties that have become internationally famous. A native of Osaka, Japan, he has almost 50 years in the United States, most of them at his 130-acre nursery in Mobile, Ala., where today his war veteran sons are carrying on in their father's footsteps and furnishing thousands of rare camellias to nurseries all over the country.

Romantically his work in this field began many years ago when his childhood sweetheart came on to be his bride and brought with her some camellia seeds in her dowry. The following year in 1917, Sawada brought in some fine white camellia seedlings and in 1930, Mrs. K. Sawada was the result of his first cross. Sadly, this plant first flowered just one year after his beloved wife had died of pneumonia and she never saw the flower. It is a small white, blushed with pink, extremely hardy and perfect for the cut flower trade.

FROM 1917 TO 1945 he grew 50,000 seedlings and they developed into the famous 26 new varieties, mostly Japonicas, but 11 are the Sasanqua type, which blooms earlier and is more hardy, Strangely they are mostly whites, although he has not particularly bred for them.

In 1945 he began to work with highly controlled hand pollination and in 1951 he and Dr. Edward Lilly of Harvard treated their first seed with X-ray. So far none of the plants has shown any mutation of leaf and nothing startling has bloomed except a new very deep purple that flowered for the first time last winter and looks very prom-

Among the camellias that Sawada is famous for is K. Sawada, a pure white, very double giant of four to five inch diameter; Inura, a huge semidouble of porcelain white with yellow stamens showing: White Empress, an early bloomer of perfect form and large size and Frizzle While, a semi-double with crinkled petals intermingled with many yellow stamens.

WHITE GIANT is just what its name implies, and resembles a lotus flower; Victory White is a semi-deuble, peony type developed during the war-time; White

IN THE SASANOUA varieties he recommands Dawn, one of the hardiest, a semi-double ivory white with flesh pink margins; Usa Bemi a light pink with white variations, a semi-double of loose peony form, which is akin to the wild Snow - on - the - Mountain, a native of Japan. Hiodoshi has nine-inch petals variegated crimson and white in a moire design and Hirvonishiki is a semi-double with petals waved and chinkled in a beautiful cherry red blotched with white.

He's Tops for Obedience

By Eleanor Avery Price

SOME BREEDS of dogs top all others in the majority of obedience trials and surveys show that one of these is the Border collie, a dog seldom seen in Southern California trials.

Those who have seen this superb working animal in a sheep dog trial, obedience event or working for his master know that he not only is tops as good dogs go but that he goes "over the top" in his excellence.

Since the Border collic is seldoni scen in Southern California, this fine breed has scarcely been noticed here. However, if you were to see one at a sheep dog trial, obedience trial, or working for his master, you would know that he not only is tops but that he actually goes over the top!

NO DOG in the ring, field or ranch can beat a good Border collie, for he is a real working dog to the fullest extent of the

Another whis-tle will start him, another send him to right or to left. little variation in the whistling is a different signal recognized and obeyed by the dog while he is working either at full speed or walk or crouch.

THE BORDER COLLIE is a beautiful animal, smaller and more compact than the regular collie, and his coat is usually black and white. He is not a new breed, for Thomas Bewick in his "General History of Quadrupeds" refers to him as far back as 1790.

The dog originated along the border between England and Scotland, hence his name. He is used extensively in Europe for

The breed is registered with the North American Sheep Dog Society, the only society in the United States which is officially recognized by the International Sheep Dog Society of Britain. Mutually acceptable rules govern the interrelationship between the two societies.

Credited with being the first person in California and perhaps in the United States to introduce the Border collie into the AKC obedience trials is Mrs. Frances McJunkin of Vallejo, with the dog, Wheat (pictured with this article).

TWO WEEKS after his first appearance in a training class, Wheat was in the ribbons at his Four months and first show. two weeks after his first show he won his utility degree at the age of one year and one week. The rules of AKC were then a little different, but when changed Wheat was the first dog on the West Coast to get a qualifying score under the new laws. Wheat never received a disqualifying score at any show.

The Border coilie has appeared Life magazine, and he was seen as Bob, Son of Battle, in the 20th Century-Fox film, "Thunder in the Valley,"

NLESS YOU are going to play Maxim's on Friday night (when you have to dress) or the London night spots (mostly dress), cut the dress clothes out. For a week, I'd say one dark suit, two pairs of slacks and a jacket; light topcoat (at this time), hat, two pairs of shoes, couple pairs of nylon shorts, same on socks; pajamas and shaving gear, etc. No point in daeron shirts. You can carry enough that you don't have to wash your own shirts.

I carry a pair of ski socks and a small pocket flashlight on the On these 15-hour overocean flights it's more comfortable in ski socks. But be sure you carry a little plastic shoehorn. It's rough to get shoes on in the morning if you've been sitting up. The Hashlight is for wandering around the plane aft-

I try to go over lighter than this and pick up a Donegal tweed jacket during the hour refueling at Shannon Airport and Daks slacks at Simpson's-in-Piecaditty in London. Good way to add inexpensively to your wardrobe.

I almost forgot. Carry a lighter. Nobody gives away matches in Europe and since you aren't used to this, you usually run out,

"What do you estimate on a trip to Mexico for two people? I mean all costs?"

The fop Mexican hotels outside Mexico City run $3 to $5 a day for two. Dinners run about $1. Imported liquor is high but tequila is low and so is Mexican rum; the imported French wines are rarely worth it and the local product is pretty raw. The beer, however, is as good as Germany. I mean Bohemia, the best.

You might gauge a little better if I tell you that I figure $30-$35 a day driving in the States and using motor courts and this drops to the $20-$25 figure the minute I cross the border.

Be sure you get Mexican in-surance at the border and don't drive at night and watch out for those truck drivers. Accidents are real trouble in Mexico. They are treated as a criminal and not a civil suit offense. I saw a conple who had been under house arrest for a month and all they did was run into a tree without anybody anywhere around. It was costing them plenty with lawyers and such stacked all over the place.

HOW TO Decorate Areas in Your House for Utility as Well as Beauty

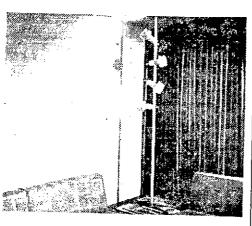

1. ART LOVERS FIND that hardboard makes an adaptable "frame" for a changing art display. Without marring the board, you can shift the pictures often, using tacks to attach them to the board. Long corner panels are good in small hallway.

3. FOUR COLORFUL enameled reflectors cling to a polished aluminum pole to light up a corner for reading. Pole attaches to table top and ceiling. Cord comes out through bottom of table.

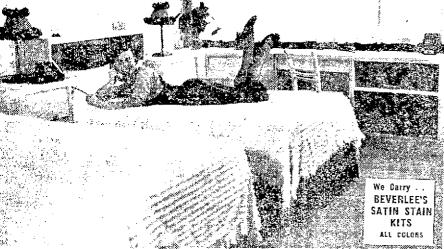

2. LET YOUR SHINIEST pois and pans hang on a perforated hardboard panel where they'll be handy, and (if you keep 'em shiny) pretty, too, Even a small stepladder won't get in your way if you get it off the floor and onto the wall.

4. HIDDEN BEHIND a neat wall of perforated hardboard are the television chassis and speakers for television, phonograph and radio. Hardboard gives good ventilation for the set. Phonograph, radio, records, and books occupy slidingdoor closet. Television dials are across the room, handy to chairs and sofa grouping.

1937, the sesquicentennial of the United States Constitution. On Oct. 24, postal officials all over the world will release at least 100 different stamps to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the United Nations.

The U. N. Postal Administration will start the parade with an issue that will be an innovation. Its three commemoratives will be issued in small souvenir sheets, each imprinted with a three, four and eight-cent stamp. These may be used as a unit and prepay 15 cents worth of postage, or they may be cut apart and used individually. It is the first time that the United Nations has produced such an issue.

Word has been received from several other countries that they would have special stamps. Switzerland, which is not a member, will produce a complete set of seven different values; Austria, which has applied for membership but has not yet been admitted, will issue a single striking design. Luxembourg will produce four stamps designed by Sam Hartz, the man who created a number of stamps for the

The important aspect of this recent trend, as far as collections are concerned, is that it enables them to make specialty collections in addition to their regular albums,

The acquisition of such "international event stamps" gives them an opportunity of arranging a small album with stamps, first-day covers and related annotations and owning at least one collection which is absolutely complete: the ambition of every follower of the philatelic avoca-

They See More

The trend toward increased visibility for sightseeing passengers on trains and busses has now extended to commercial air-

eraft for the first time. Hawaiian Airlines announces its new Douglas Viewmaster planes, designed by AiResearch Aviation Service Co., a division of the Garrett Corp., will incorporate four panoramic view win-dows almost five feet long and a foot and a half wide, two on each side of the aircraft. Such unusually large windows in aircraft are a distinct departure from past concepts of airplane design. With eight additional foot-square windows as visibility features, these planes will give sightseers and especially camera enthusiasts, an entirely new look at the Hawaiian Islands.

Locks Are Deceiving that may shock the daylights out of John Olgin's many Long Beach friends, Olgin is a grandfather.

In fact, he has been a grandfather for three years.

The reason this is surprising is simply because Olgin, with his smooth tanned checks and sleek dark hair, looks like a boy of 24 Actually he is 44 years old and has been in the restaurant business for more years than he can remember.

For those who may not be aware of it, Olgin is the suave, efficient maitre d' hotel in the Willon Hotel's Skyroom. When it comes to serving special dishes, he is perhaps one of the most dextrous operators on the local restaurant scene. He does tricks with two forks in the same hand that are quite magical.

Persons who want to enjoy a display of real culinary skill or-der the Skyroom's Medallion of This specially is prepared by Olgin right at the patron's table. The dish consists of delectable small filets of beef which Olgin sautes in wine over the brilliant flame of a copper chal-ing dish. During his perform-ance, he is attended by several waiters who hand him key ingredients at crucial moments in the manner of assistants belying a great surgeon.

OTHER SKYROOM specialties which are tantalizingly palatable these days include Broiled Pepper Steak served in a cocotte; Veal Cutlet Bleu Gordon; Shish Kebab with scrumptions Rice Pilaff and Fried Chicken Grandmere. This latter item is actually a rather homey meal, grandmere being French for grandmother. The chicken in-cluding corn fritters, biscuits and honey and all the other trimmings of grandma's day- makes a hit with everyone,

Currently the Skyroom, with its incomparable views of the harbor and adjoining Southland areas, is all dolled up in a Hawaiian motif. The featured or-chestra is Danny Kuaana's Hawaiian band which puts on two excellent floor shows nightly at 10:30 and 12:30,

They jump to the window, their only scape—but the mob overflows to the street, cutting them off.

"Thar's ben a turr'ble mistake, boys," Big Fallon hollers down. "We're fightin' th' wrong people!" He drops to the ground, the war begins, and Lance, Blaze, and Fitz pile out of their prison.

The mountain man considers himself a match for any ten men. This is something of an exaggeration, however, for presently the trappers are outnumbered only 5-to-1 and find themselves backed to the river.

PAPA'S PROPAGANDA POOR

Papa's handy when you need a nickel.

But the average kindergarten inmate has only the vaguest notion of how Dad earns his nickels, a recent experiment shows.

Students in Miss Jacqueline Logan's kindergarten class at Lowell School were given this question:

"What is your father's job?"

The answers prove that what Papa needs is more propaganda about his work. Here are some of the replies. In each case, the actual occupation follows in parentheses.

Cassandra Hill: "He works where my mother's mother does, no, I mean my father's mother. He writes down and finishes the book." (Sales manager.)

Gregory Beck: "He has a train job; he picks up people and engines, too. He is on a bus sometimes, too." (Bus driver.) Brian Blurton: "He makes steel in Los Angeles. He wears clean clothes to work." (Plant manager.)

Mark Towle: "He works for money. He drives a plane. I really don't know what he works for." (Buyer-expediter.)

Glenn Harwood: "My dad works for a government. Not a real government, but he calls it a government. He works at Douglas. He guides the planes out and puts up the flags for them." (Auditor.)

Joseph Rain: "He goes on a bus, morning, afternoon and night time, to Vallejo to get on the ship. He used to drive the ship, but now he cleans it." (Navy employe.)

Donnie Smeallie: "He works across the street from the flying red horse gas station. He makes machines and cabinets—shiny ones. But do you know that my mother has a champagne appetite and my daddy has a beer purse?" (Merchant.)

Gail Adams: "He shines blocks, the kind we play with in nool. They have all different kinds of people there." (School

Barbara Bowman: "He writes down on paper what he knows." (Civic manager.)

Julie Demier: "He goes to the office in the club, the Virginia Country Club. He plays golf there—1 don't know what else." (Lawyer.)

Maria Kotarinos: "He used to work at Van Nuys and sold seat covers." (Field representative for General Motors.)

Innice Tweedy: "I exactly don't know. He says lie works in a great big building, but I don't think he really does." (Property manager.)

Karen Webecke: "He goes to the occan and takes care of the tuna fish. Everytime we pass by where he works, we roll the windows up—it smells so bad." (School principal.)

Vicki Baver: "He works on airplanes at Douglas. He comes home at night and goes in the morning. He tells men what to do and uses papers." (Douglas worker.)

President Allowed to Take Walk Today

DENVER (UP)-Dr. Paul Dudley White, the famous Boston heart specialist, said Saturday President Eisenhower should be able to leave the hospital and fly back east to his Gettysburg, Pa., home between Nov. 5 and 12.

Dr. White told a news conference that it may be two or three months before the President's physicians can tell how completely he recovered from the heart attack he suffered Sept. 24.

Dr. White said that in all probability the flight to Gettysburg for convalescence will be broken by a day or two in Washington.

Dr. White also confirmed that the President's heart healing was a little behind schedule during the first part of his recovery, but has now caught up. He said he considers it certain that the President will convalesce at his Gettysburg farm.

However, during that period, he said, the President should be able to attend meetings with the cabinet and other officials from time to time in either Washington or Gettysburg.

we would have a very fine park system. The above figures do not include our 300 acres of beach or our 325 acres of school playgrounds.

From the report of the L. A. County Park Superintendent one gets an idea of what it costs to develop and maintain a park. It will be startling to many of our readers. When they realize what it means to their taxes they will be even more concerned. The cost of development runs from $6.000 to $15.000 an acre. The cost of maintenance averages $1.250 on acre per year.

Two years ago, when it appeared we would have an unlimited amount of money, the people voted $3,000,-000 for development of some 163 acres of parks in 11 districts. That averaged $17,100 an acre for development cost alone. If this amount is voted in bonds it will call for additional taxes of about 3 per cent. Then the cost of maintenance added on to present costs would be 163 acres at minimum costs of $1,250 an acre or about $203,-750 a year. That is equal to another 3 per cent increase in annual city taxes. Thus development and maintenance of these 163 acres would add about 6 per cent to city taxes. Greater development of the 1.059 acres now owned by the city would cost proportionately.

At the same time the people voted to use oil money for this development of present park lands they voted another $3.750,000 to acquire more land. That would probably mean another 750 acres. Added to the figures above, taxpayers would face a probable 30 per cent increase in tax rates for this full park program. These projects are being restudied by the Mayor's Committee with a view to submitting a bond issue on a ballot early in acres on the east side of the San Gabriel River. It is land close to the Orange County line. It was acquired when we thought we had unlimited money. Now some thoughtful citizens are suggesting that this land be sold for subdivisions and the proceeds used for developing neighborhood parks throughout the city. The above figures showing land now owned do not include some 480 acres set aside for golf courses of which only about 171 acres are now developed.

To those who question the cost of maintenance of parks we refer them to the Los Angeles County figures. We also suggest they check what it costs them for a gardener for their own yard. They will find that the cost plus water, fertilizer and new plants will run well above the figures shown per acre. We need more parks. The people should be willing to pay more taxes for more parks. But they should be sure they do not overdo what is a very expensive part of civic services.—L.A.C.

LBSC Stages First Homecoming Long Beach Visit

Class of '50 · 'Old Grads' Hail Changes

Long Beach State College staged its first Homecoming Saturday, with more than 200 alumni turning out for what will become a traditional annual celebration.

Joan Delleney, class of '53, president of the State College Alumni Assn., was chairman of the activities for the young "old grads," the college's first graduating class of 1950.

About half of the 32 graduates from 1950 attended the home-coming program, which included tours of the college's new multi-million-dollar campus, a tea on the lower campus, and a football game with Caltech.

THE CLASS OF 1950, most of whom entered the teaching profession, remarked on the changes wrought since they were graduated. In that year, the college still was in "apartment campus" at Anaheim St. and Pacific Coast Hwy. Not even the temporary campus, now replaced by per-manent buildings on a 320-acre site, had been built at that time.

A parade of floats was held at half-time at the game, with top prizes going to Sigma Pi, sweep-stakes award, and Delta Zeta, theme award.

The Sigma Pi float depicted a clock showing the progress of the college on its face from 1950 to 1955. The theme award depicted a 1950 graduate walking out of a book of knowledge into the world.

VICE MAYOR Gerald Desmond, Sylvia Petrasek, Buffums' decorator, and Miss Delleney were judges of the floats.

Earlier in the day, the floats, the college's "pep" band, its song and cheer leaders, and Homocoming Queen Margie Getz toured Long Beach promoting the homecoming.

P. Victor Peterson, college president, officers of the Alumni Assn., and faculty members were hosts at the tea.

WASHINGTON—The Post Office Department's plans to streamline and modernize service all over the country ran into trouble right in its own backyard last week.

A little Maryland suburb, Garrett Park, opened a campaign to prevent the post office from delivering mail to doorsteps. The department had proposed making Garrett Park a substation of Kensington, which delivers the mail.

of Kensington, which derivers the mail.

But Garrett Parkites—particularly housewives—like their present "cracker barrel" post office which doesn't deliver but which gives them a built-in excuse to sit around and gossip under guise of waiting for the mail. And they say Kensington's mail deliveries are slower than their own do-it-yourself method.

So they called a mass meeting to protest modernization, and demand permission to keep on walking downtown for the mail.

The National Highway Users' Conference monthly mazagine reports these observations by a Washington driving school optomated to bolster their cause:

rett Park dichards got fresh evidence to bolster their cause:

The Kensington post office delivered to the Garrett Park post office a bag of 10-month-old mail, mostly Christmas cards. Kensington explained that the bag had been lost in New York with the bag had been lost in New York traffic regulations better than men.

Spadework by top American delegates at the United Nations Saturday led the U. S. to call for an international "atoms for peace" organization.

Private talks between U. S. Deputy U. N. Representative James J. Wadsworth; Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister V. V. Kuznetsov and Indian Delegate V. K. Krishna Mennon were credited with bringing the American proposal for a "working level" meeting of 12 governments in Washington in December.

A Pretty Gull's Like a Melody?

(Editor's Note: This is the last of four articles on the Long Beach area shoreline and its wildlife.)

By VERA WILLIAMS

In the Long Beach area are two principal kinds of sea gulls—Western and California. It is a little difficult to tell them apart. Western gulls are pink-footed, white with a light gray mantle

Western gulls are pink-footed, with a very dark mantle. At a distance, the dark gray of the mantle stands out as a dark or black sopt superimposed on the white of the under parts. Its wing tips are white. First-year birds are dark gray-brown, and the second year the head and under parts are white, and the bird has the "saddlebacked" appearance of an adult gull. Western gulls have yellow bills with a red spot on the lower mandible.

Distribution of the black on the under side of the tip of the wing of the adult California gull identifies it at almost any distance. It is cut straight across as if dipped in ink. Closer, the wings show contrasting black tips with white spots or "mirrors" within the black. Its legs are green and its bill is yellow with red or red and black spot on lower mandible. First-year birds are dusky brown with flesh-colored bills with a black end; the second year the bird is paler, whiter below and with more white at the base of the tail.

ALSO SEEN HERE are the ring-billed gull, similar in pattern to the California gull but distinguished by smaller size, lighter mantle, complete black ring on bill and yellow-green legs; the herring gull, with a pearl gray mantle, black wing tips and flesh-colored legs, and the glaucous-winged gull, a pink footed gull with a pale gray mantle and gray markings toward the tips of the wings.

Gulls nest in the Channel Islands, islands off Baja California and on cliffs on the mainland where they will not be disturbed. In the area all year are California brown pelicans, and around Bolsa Chica slough are white pelicans which nest at the Salton Sea and the Great Salt Lake. The browns have a wingspread of 6½ feet.

The adult California brown pelican is a ponderous, dark water-bird with white about the head and neck. Immatures have dark heads.

A pelican flies with its head in unched over its shoulders and its long flat bill resting corrofortably on its curved neck. Its size and flight—a few flaps and a sail—proclaim it a pelican.

The white pelican, with a wing and a great yellow throat pouch. It often flies at a great height, sailed the pelican with a fish. As the pelican comes up, a fish dangling from its face, the sea gulls grab.

The pelican puts up little or no fight; it philosophically dives for another fish.

Democrats kept the farm question alive Saturday night as Gov. Averell Harriman of New York joined Adlai Stevenson in calling for price supports at 90 per cent of parity for basic farm crops.

Harriman, who told an earlier news conference he is not an active candidate for president and expects to serve his full term as governor running through 1958, ripped into Republican farm policies in a speech prepared for a Democratic Midwest farm conference at Des Moines.

THE REPUBLICAN National

THE REPUBLICAN National Committee said Chairman Leonard W. Hall would issue a "hard-hitting reply" to Harriman and Stevenson in a statement today for Monday newspapers.

Strvenson's support of the 90-per-cent-of-parity program, as opposed to the Republican flexible price-prop program now on the books, was telegraphed to the Des Moines conference Friday.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson, a leading target of the Democrats as the farm topic builds up to a major issue in the 1956 parallel. Said Friendlel. up to a major issue in the 1956 presidential campaign, said Friday that most of the farmer's postwar adjustment problems are "now behind him." He said the farmer "has reason to believe that another 25 million customers will be added to his list in the next 25 years."

HARRIMAN, WHOSE name has been prominently mentioned along with Stevenson and Sen. along with Stevenson and Sen.
Estes Kefauver of Tennessee as a candidate for the 1956 Democratic presidential nomination, cnce he not only expects to complete his full term as governor but hopes to be reelected.

Other political developments Saturday:

SEN. GEORGE (D-Ga) said in an interview he looked for a "sharp division of opinion" between the Democrats and Republicans over methods of cutting taxes at the next session of Congress. George said budget balancing is "clearly in sight" and the time has come for incorporate cuts.

and the time has come for income-tax cuts.
George also predicted party a new highway program, Social Security expansion and school construction proposals.

GOV. ROBERT B. MEYNER (D-NJ), in a talk prepared for a Democratic rally at Perth Am-boy, N.J., scoffed at a Republican claim that New Jersey's state legislative elections Nov. 8 will indicat how the country will vote indicat how the country will vote in the presidential contest next year. Meyner said the election next month will be decided strictly on state issues. He was replying to a news account of a New Jersey speech by Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex), recuperating from a heart attack at his Texas ranch, had Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) as a weekend guest, but the latter and Johnson's administrative aide, George Reedy, said there was no political significance in the visit.

Aimed at reducing the state's death rate from cancer of the breast, the intensive program will be launched here Monday morning with five days of free showings of the American Cancer Society's documentary film "Breast Examination."

The film, which describes in detail an easy method by which any woman can examine herself in the privacy of her home for early signs of breast cancer, runs for 16 minutes. A physician will answer questions from the audience after the film is shown, according to Miss Patricia Reid, American Cancer Society educational chairman.

We believe we are correct, however, in saying that the confusion and bad feeling and deep concern were felt by relatively few citizens.

Not that they lack interest in the U.S. or the U.N.

But most rational, fair-minded persons realize that there is no basic competition between United Nations and United States-that it is possible to be an American and at the same time credit the U. N. with some small measure of accomplishment for the good of mankind.

Few persons by this time hold the illusion that the United Nations has accomplished all the ideals which are so glowingly described in the U. N. Charter. But few, also, would want to destroy it rather than hope that in time it will become a more effective organization.

The United Nations was born in this country. We have been a member of it from its inception. There's absolutely no reason why an American citizen should feel offended by United Nations Day; and no reason why a supporter of the United Nations should not observe United States Day.

NEWSPRINT HIKE

As predicted some weeks ago by Sir Eric Bowater, chair-man of Bowater Paper Corp., Ltd., the price of newsprint is going up. The astute British-er, who could give most U. S. tycoops lessons in making tycoons lessons in making money, said that the newsprint industry in the last three years has sustained a 15 per cent rise in labor costs alone.
Sir Eric contends that these costs have been absorbed by hewsprint manufacturers, but stated that "we do not intend to pass everything on to the consumer" which was real nice of him.

Before shedding any tears for the Bowater and other en-terprises, I decided to get the facts from the Toronto Finan-cial Counsel. This is what they

Speaking of the eight companies listed, the Toronto Financial Counsel says that "aggregate net profits of $65,310,654 in the first six months of 1955 were almost $11 million, or 19.8 per cent greater than $54,493,966 in the like period in 1954."

A separate report for Bo-water Paper Corp., Ltd., lists a net profit for the year end-ing Dec. 31, 1954, of $13,274,-856 as compared with $8,027,-745 in 1953. addition, the Montr

Browder, Accused of Perjury, Hired as Informant by 'Fund for Republic'

WASHINGTON - There's. something strange and mysterious about the case of mysterious about the case of Earl Browder, Secretary General of the Communist party in America from 1929 to 1945, who, it is announced, has been hired by "The Fund for the Republic" at a substantial salary per year for part of his time as a "source of information and raw material."

time as a "source of informa-tion and raw material."
"The Fund for the Repub-lic" is one of the so-called "I i b e r a l" organizations, fi-nanced by the Ford Founda-lion, and one of the cries of protest raised by the "left wing" is that the government uses paid informants or pays ex-Communists as wirnesses to testify in trials involving Com-munist problems.

But so far as can be discovered here, there is no case on record in which the government has ever paid money to any person while he himself was under indictment.

There is pending against Browder a criminal indictment accusing him of perjury. WHY HESITANT?

But the curious aspect of the matter is that if Browder, who claims to have forsaken the Communist party, has done so, why should he hesitate to furnish all the information he posseses to his own government? He was summoned a few days ago to testify hefore few days ago to testify before the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security in executive session. He was under oath. He is reported to have refused to give any information of substance—and, of course, in such a refusal, he is protected against prosecution under the Fifth Amendment to the Con-

Again and again it is said that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has endeavored to persuade Browder to give under oath the history of the Communist party as Browder knows it—the very material sought by "The Fund for the Republic"—but he has declined to do so.

The question naturally arises. whether "The Fund for the Re-public" can be sure that it is getting complete information from a man who declines to testify under oath before his own government. HOLDOUT"

Various attempts have been made in recent years to have Browder make a clean breast of what he knows. There have been suggestions that some charitable foundation grant money to finance him during the period when he devotes his whole time to refreshing his recollection of what happened when he was in command of the Communist party in this country. These effects in this country. These efforts collapsed because those to whom Browder talked became convinced he was holding back the key parts of the story. Browder's position is that the Communist party never engaged in espionage while he was connected with it. Maybe he was unaware of that phase but, if so, he should not object to telling who he met at meetings from 1929 to 1945 and what they said, and what officials of the American government or other governments were in consultation with him and when and under what circumstances.

A spokesman for "The Fund A spokesman for "The Fund for the Republic" says that the organization isn't interested in obtaining "espionage secrets" and that Browder will not write any books or studies or "control a single comma or comment" that goes into any of the projects for which $250,000 has been granted by the Ford Foundation.

he Ford Foundation.

But the information, when made available to "The Fund for the Republic," either has to be credited or discarded.

Some who have talked with Browder in recent years have come to the conclusion that he is interested only in getting across his version of Communist party activities. There are indications that "The Fund for the Republic" prefers the version that the Communist party is a political institution without a political institution rather than a conspiratorial organiza-

Up to now Browder has refused to cooperate with his own government. He insists he is not a Communist now and insist also that from 1929 to 1945, when he was head of the Communist party, there was nothing relating to subversion or espionage going on with his knowledge. It is, indeed, an unsolved mystery, and some ofsolved mystery, and some of-ficials are still hopeful that Browder some day will come through with the complete through with the comstory of what did happen.

MODESTY forbade our opening the subject. But now that Assemblyman Charles H. Wilson has suggested state officialdom ought to be thinking of some suitable way to com-mend Long Beach for its contribution to state progress and welfare, it is not out of order to make further comment. Mr. Wilson, of course, said it in connection

The purpose here is to give

MALCOLM EPLEY

Mr. Wilson's idea the courtesy of acknowledgement — and some added documentation. It was a pretty compliment he paid.

He mentioned that Long

Beach had contributed the cost of the State College campus site (nearly $1 million), that it had provided the Navy with a base site for $1, that it had purchased right-of-way for the state freeway. He mentioned harbor development, the proposed tidelands project such as the Auditorium Annex and the Armed Services YMCA, the Marina project.

It is obvious that all these projects are of definite value to Long Beach itself. But it is fair to recognize, as did Mr. Wilson, that they offer benefits that extend far beyond the corporate limits of Long Beach. That is an important point in connection with the legal and legislative issues involved in the tidelands ruckus. Because the Supreme Court in the Mallon case indicated that tidelands oil money should be spent primarily in the interest of the state -with local benefits only incidental-the auditorium annex and Armed Services YMCA have been held up pending legal determination of their status.

These facilities, when built, will serve the entire area.

So also would a major beach development here. What difference is there, from the standpoint of public benefit, between a city beach park development at Long Beach and the state beach park at Huntington Beach? If state money can be spent at Huntington Beach -and it is properly spent there— use of money from the state-granted tidelands should be justified in the development of beach facilities at Long Beach.

This is a major beach resort city in the largest concentration of population in the state. What we do to develop our beach and similar facilities serves that population. It serves a great many more people than mountain area parks and other facilities which have received state tidelands money.

But to get back to Mr. Wilson's suggestion for some symbol of state appreciation of Long Beach, possibly the strongest justification for such a thing would be the contribution Long Beach made to the state's fight for the tidelands against federal scizure.

As every reader of these columns knows, the state might not even have its tidelands if Long Beach had not given its vigorous leadership to that struggle. And there was a time in that controversy when Long Beach could have compromised, to its own benefit but at cost to the state-and refused to do so on principle and out of loyalty to California. LOYALTY 'REWARDED'

Since then, that loyalty has been "re-warded" by a greedy attack on the city's tide-lands resources. This has been accompanied by continuous and unjustified assault upon the city's good name by the sponsor of the seizure measure, who calls frequent press conferences and hurls his charges

Other responsible California leaders might well follow Mr. Wilson's example and rebuke the author of these unfounded accusations.

Hosmer will leave here today for Lincoln, Nobr., where he will attend the annual convention of the National Reclamation Assn. The Long Beach Congressman expects to get in some spade work against the Upper Colorado River project, which he claims is a threat to California's water supply from the Colorado River.

Hosmer will then fly back to Northern California to join the panel group. A member of the House Interior Subcommittee, he also is scheduled to visit the Pacific Northwest for hearings on various proposed federal projects.

Tech Scores 34-0 Victory

ATLANTA (UP) — Georgia Tech gave its second, third and fourth stringers a workout Saturday and the big Engineer squad rolled up an easy 34-0 victory over outmanned Florida State University before 30,000 spectators.

Tech coach Bobby Dodd, sharpening his offensive and defensive weapons for next week's big battle with Duke, left his first string in only long enough to make a touchdown seven and a half minutes after the opening kickoff. The subs took it from there and scored once in the second period, twice in the third, and once in the fourth. Second string quarterback Toppy Vann racked up two touchdowns.

Greenberg Withdraws Bid for Seals, Raps Doubletalk

CLEVELAND, O. (EP)—Hank Greenberg, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, Saturday night withdrew his offer to buy the San Francisco Seals baseball franchise because he received "doubletalk" from Pacific Coast League officials.

"I made a good offer for the Seals by proposing to take over a franchise leaded with $200,000 in delts," he said. "I planned to pay off the creditors with the ballclub's earnings once we made it a paying proposition, but some said my plan asked the league to donate the franchise to me. It's no donation when I offer to risk my money to revitalize a ballclub that has lost $900,000."

that has lost $900,600."

Chire Goodwin, president of the PCL, undaunted by Greenberg's withdrawal of his offer, said Saturday night the league had "other offers" for the San Francisco franchise.

He refused to name hidders other than the Milwaukee Braves for the financially-troubled franchise. A representative of the Braves met with the Seals' "little corporation", last week, but Goodwin said that meeting did not give Milwaukee a clear field to purchase the club.

Goodwin added that the league will "operate the club (Seals) if necessary."

The crashing Cadets, as expected, dominated a "no-contest game" as they overwhelmed the three-time losers.

Army started its landslide victory when Columbia's Jim Mooney got off a limping 10-yard punt. Army took over on the Columbia 31 and in three plays Cadet Mike Zeigler swept end from the 10 to score. Ralph Chesnauskas kicked the point.

Army added three touchdowns in the second quarter. The first was a 66-yard drive, topped on the 11th play when Pat Uebel plunged from the three. The second was a 12-play, 69-yard drive with Bob Munger slicing tackle from the six and Lash gave Army a 27-0 halftime lead with his 72-yard scoring run through tackle.

Murtland set up the next Army touchdown with a 35-yard point return to the Columbia 13. Carrying on four of the five subsequent plays, Murtland finally took it over from the one.

Army drave 61 yards at the opening of the fourth quarter with Murtland carrying it over from the nine and the final Army touchdown was set up when Chesnauskas recovered a Columbia fumble on the Lions 28. Al Martina swept end from the 11.

Alabama Drops 10th Straight

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UP) — Mississippi State ground out touchdowns with equal ease whether Bill Stanton or Jim Bain was at the helm Saturday Bain was at the helm Saturday and whacked Alabama, 26-7, for its fifth straight victory. A homecoming crowd of 28,000 saw Alabama go down to its 10th consecutive defeat over a twoseason span, but got some hope for the future from Clay Walls, a brilliant sophomore quarter-

The union wants a 24-cent hourly across-the-board increase effective immediately.

THERE HAS been some con-lecture by the union as to whether or not the company whether or not the company offer actually has been made. Raymond Gregg, union business agent, said the company made the offer but only on condition that all union negotiators accept it. Gregg said he objected, thereby making the offer void. However, J. F. This grateful citizen is happy to comply, and thus I dedicate this Beach Combing today to my country.

From there, one could go on with a lot of writing. Or one could do just as well, or perhaps better, by simply proposing the finest toast of them all:

"To the United States!"

IT HAS been a great time for the telephone co. It has struggled all week with inquiries and complaints after the wholesale number change last Sunday.

Perhaps the oddest of them all came from a certain irate woman subscriber with a GArfield number. She said somebody had made a mistake with her dial. The G and A were in different spaces, and how could a person dial them both at the

DAVY CROCKETT is fading. American kids, like American grownups, can go just so long for a fad, and it is apparent the hero of the Alamo is soon to be allowed to occupy his traditional niche in history. Local record and sheet music

SOME small consternation, I'm told, occurred in Zaferia after the report in this dept. last Sunday that there was a man in the early days named M. H. Zaferia.

Bart Burgin, whose building firm (W. Jay Burgin) goes way back to the real Zaferia days, went right out to check the old timers in the neighborhood. He couldn't find anyone who remembered there was ever a man around here named Zaferia.

DR. PALMER is past president of the American Nature Study Society. the National Association of Biology Teachers, the National Council in Elementary Science, and the National Research Council and has served as chairman of the wildlife, teacher training, and pre-college education committees of that organization.

He was the first Fulbright teaching fellow to New Zealand and represented American conservation societies at the 1954 meeting of the International Union for Protection of Nature, at Copenhagen. He will represent the American societies at Ediniburgh in 1956.

Dr. Palmer is a past president of the Study Grailes and appliances, police reported.

Three burglaries in Long Beach early Saturday netted more than $2,000 in clothing, nickel bars and appliances, police reported.

The clothing, valued at approximately $1,000, was stolen from the Style Tailors and Cleaners, who pried open a French door at the rear of the building. Fifty nickel ancde bars weighing 25 pounds each were carried away from the Western Electroplating Co., 810 W. Esther St. The bars, along with bags and hooks that went with them, are valued at $1,442.50.

Burglars broke a window to gain entrance, shop owner Ed-Local school records show there was. He was a member of the school board in 1889 or thereabouts, and it seems unlikely that a local community (since absorbed by Long Beach) would have been given the odd name of Zaferia without there being some connection with a prominent citizen of that name. (I'm assuming that a man who got on the school board in 1889 was prominent.)

Like Bro. Burgin, I'm intrigued with this little quirk in local history and would like to know more about M. H. Zaferia if anyone has any information.

Thinking a descendant might be around, I've checked the city and telephone directories. There's no descendant here, apparenty, who still has the name.

Oddly enough, no business firm out there on the east side has seen fit to adopt this distinctive name. Somebody, it seems to me, is passing up a

But teachers and administrators in the local system feel a child with extra brain power should have a chance to use his ntellect to best advantage.

The national government has a program to conserve natural resources. The Long Beach school system has a program to con-serve human resources.

Long Beach's Very Superior Pupil program is administered under the guidance of Dr. Theron Freese, deputy superintendent of schools.

INCLUDED IN THE PRO-GRAM are 4 per cent of the stu-dents in grades 4 through 12. In all, about 1.200 students now receive attention by the schools as superior pupils.

as superior pupils.

"The problem," said Dr. Freese, "is to aid the gifted student who may be lost in the crowd to utilize his talents and to help him make achievements on a level equal to his abili-ties." Identifying the superior pupil is a major problem of the pro-gram. Teachers are encouraged to point out pupils who appear capable of participating.

The actual identification is accomplished with the aid of nor-mal testing devices. Occasionally corroborative tests are made.

Dr. Freese points out, "The purpose of the identification is not to pin a badge on a child in order to set him aside. We want to know the capabilities of the student in order to work with him."

U.S. Books May Fathom Booms, Busts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board today unveiled a new nabookkeeping system designed to help penetrate the mysteries of how and why economic ups and downs take place.

It is called "a flow-of-funds system of national accounts." It has been nearly 20 years in development.

It involves periodic publication

It involves periodic publication of economic data in a form that, for one thing, may provide an answer to a hot political question — whether a tax cut that lowers business costs results eventually in benefits to consumers, or whether the man in the street is benefited most by a tax cut that helps him directly.

For the first time, the new flow-of-funds account of what goes on in the labyrinth of the economy brings together both financial and non-financial detail in one comprehensive study. Previous over-all economic accounts like the gross national product figures and national income statistics developed by the Commerce Department have dealt more with what happened than with how it came to pass.

THE NEW ACCOUNT records not only the fact that you bought a car, a house or a refrigerator; it also shows where you got the money for the down payment, how much of the transaction was on credit, who provided the credit, and how your purchase sent ripples of money and credit up and down the line.

It also is calculated to show

It also is calculated to show what general developments take place after a tax cut. If the cut is mainly for individuals, the account would show what the public does with its increased income—whether savings or consumption increase, and in what types.

A reserve board staff task force, which began work in 1946, has set up flow-of-fund tables for all years beginning with 1939 through 1954.

The Reserve Board said the tables now will be published annually, probably starting in August, 1956, and eventually on a quarterly basis.

The forecast was delivered at the closed meeting here of the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council with Weeks and two other cabinet officers, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey and Secretary of Welfare Folsom.

It represented the unanimous finding of BAC's technical panel of 14 private industry economists, and was affirmed by individual reports from as many heads of large corporations. All are members of the 162-man, "blue ribbon" advisory body.

Weeks and Donald K. David, chairman of BAC's economic policy committee and former dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business, briefed re-porters on the three-and-one-half-hour economic symposium. David summarized for report-

1. Retail sales this year will 1. Retail sales this year win run 5 to 8 per cent higher than last, and in 1956 will be as high "or perhaps a little higher." 2. Industry's outlay for new plants and equipment, spurred by consumer demand, will maintain the present high rate—about 29 billion dollars annually.

3. The trend of rising employment and falling unemployment "will continue into 1956."

Once they try this new and proven method they are overjoyed. Just like magic, in many cases folks are able to hear without their hearing aid after the very first treatment.

The treatment is simple. It consists of three steps and takes about 45 minutes. If the hearing loss is due to a nerve condition a special treatment is given, if the loss is due to catarrh a different treatment is given and if it is a bone condition, the tympanicoscillations treatment is given "I have been wearing a hearing ald for a period of three years, after receiving only three treatments! was able to discard my hearing ald I highly recommend Tympanic-Oscillations to anyone now wearing a mechanical device."

WHY DEAL THROUGH A REALTOR?

LISTEN — On Tuesday, October 4th, twenty-seven (27) brokers and sales-people joined the Long Beach Realty Board. Do you know what they had to do? They had to stand, and with uplifted hand repeat the following pledge and swear to

I PLEDGE MYSELF

To protect the individual right of Real Estate Ownership and to widen the opportunity to enjoy it;

To be nonorable and honest in all dealings; To seek better to represent my clients by building my knowledge and competence;

To act fairly towards all in the spirit of the Golden Rule; To serve well my community, and through it my country.

To observe the Realtor's Code of Ethics and conform my conduct to its lofty ideals. Lakewood Housing Corp. Muntz Realty Garth, James G.

By IOLA MASTERSON

All we have strength enough to say at this point is "wuz wunnerful" in regards district Klwanis convention in San Diego which ended officially Wednesday but for several Long Beach couples went on for the rest of the week as they scattered to various places to round out festivities.

Among those who put on their best bonnets and headed for the border city last Sunday were Kay and "Smitty" Smith, Hal and Helen Moore (Hal is Downtown Club prexy), Kenny and Dorris Martinson, Joe and Dorothy Mullarky, Howell and Vyrle Honeywell, Caroline and Sted Gould, Hope and Bob Cunningham and Floyd and Emily Beswick—all from the downtown club.

East Long Beach Kiwanians and their "annes," not to be East Long Beach Kiwanians and their "annes," not to be outdone, sent a good-sized delegation, too, and among those justing of the joys of the giant get-together were George and Peg Cain (George is chief man of the club), Evelyn and "Kirk" Kirkeeng, Connie and Phil Putnam, Esther and "Tuck" Thompson and Mabel and George Swift.

The Uptown Club—usually one of the liveliest at any conclave—was well represented by old prez himself, Ray Bliley, and wife, Sylvia, as well as Mabel and Jim Bentley, Fern and John Kelly, Betty Lou and Ed Lovell and Grace and George Calderwood.

Suppose it's like looking down the long, wrong end of a shot-gun barrel to reach 'way back to last week when the Long Beach Dinner Club met but it was such a good evening can't resist. Mary and Julian Knutson topped off the proceedings with cocktails for a group after the meeting, which took place in the Pageant Room of the Wilton. Margaret had just finished re-doing her house with shutters and things and it looked so pretty everyone talked constantly about the home's appearance and the excellent talk of the evening by Honorable Walter II. Judd, Congressman from Minnesota.

All even up now is Marilyn and John Howe's family with two boys and two girls since the arrival of little son John Alton. Unfortunately the family will be leaving Long Beach soon to take up residence in San Fernando Valley where Marilyn and John are in the process of building a new home. They expect, durn it, to move up thataway in December so John can be closer to his work with North American in the development of atomic-power for peacetime use.

The excitement of a first plane ride belonged to Mazelle Willhoit the other day when, with husband Harold, she traveled up to San Francisco on a joy jaunt. "Like it?" we asked. "Yecess" was the dubious reply. But even so Mazelle, in her brief experience, thinks its a wonderful way to travel.

Ean Francisco certainly seems to be stealing a lot of local trade in the vacation department. Of course Joanne and Bill Dummit didn't go up this week just for fun (which they had, of course) but for Bill to attend a dental convention.

Gourmet-spot finders of the first order are Leota and Stan Nickle, who have eaten at every restaurant of note within a 50-mile radius of anywhere they've ever been. S'truth. When in doubt call up the Nickles to find out what's best on the cur-

Freshly opened champagne bubbled as merrily as a mountain brook at Nancy and Myrl Ott's home last weekend when they hosted the wedding reception for chic young bride, Mitzi Milone, and her fresh-from-the-altar husband, John Kelly. Especially fun to have on hand were Mitzi's parents, Ann and Louis Milone of Livingstone, N. J., who traveled here for the nuntials of week ago yesterday, and John's mother, Ruth Kelly. The young in-lovers are still honeymooning up Carmel, Monterey and San Francisco way but should be home in a day or two to settle in their 69-61st Pl. apartment. Neat wedding present from Mitzi's parents was down payment on a new Garden Grove dream home which they will occupy 'ere long.

Vera Williams of the Independent, Press-Telegram news staff will leave Monday by plane for Arlington, Va., to visit Maj. and Mrs. James H. Bowman and little daughters, Debby and Cathy. Mrs. Bowman (nee Carol Sundquist), a few years ago was an energetic cub reporter for the Press-Telegram. Vera's other niece, Mrs. Allen L. Ford, who doesn't like cats, broad-mindedly has promised to "cat-sit" for Vera's pampered Gray Lady and the four stray cats who customarily take their meals at the Williams household.

Tiny Becky and Scottle Winston are finding a strange new attraction in the nursery of their home on E. First St. Soft (well, maybe not always) crys and coos usher forth from the room as their young brother, who carries the distinguished name of his prominent grandfather, William Henry Winson, settles down to charming his mom and pop, Nance and Bill.

Also coming under his fascination are the senior Winstons, and his maternal grandmother, Ann Davies Ruff, who traveled from her home in Alexandria, Va., to greet the new arrival. Her husband, Capt, Lawrence E. Ruff, who is on duty in Washington, D. C., will join her later this month.

Let's talk about the Pike. Not the amusement zone; we mean Dr. Claire Pike and his Elizabeth. Come Friday, they'll be up in the wild blue, headed for Washington, D. C., for the annual assembly of the American College of Osteopathic Surgeons. New Clinic Observes First Year

By ELAINE RISINGER

A little girl with wide brown eyes sat quietly in the clinic waiting room, a little afraid of the whitecoated man and nurse who popped in and out of the rooms. She would have been pretty except for one facial mar . . . her eyes were crossed.

In another chair nearby a d-year-old whispered to save his sore throat. This was his fifth siege with tonsillitis in a year. On down the room, youngsters waited, some with minor illnesses, some demand-ing major attention, but all about to receive a boost toward healthy, happy childhood as a gift from 160 women.

For nine years, Children's Benefit League has tucked handicapped children under its protective wing. To this goal, they dedicate fund raising efforts and their volunteer work, always trying to extend their scope of help, Mrs. William Mohler, president of the league,

This fall marks a particularly important anniversary in league history. Children's Clinic, sponsored jointly by the league and Community Hospital, completed its first year by moving into new headquarters babind the hospital. ters behind the hospital.

As an extension of their work, league members now financially and with volunteer efforts support the clinic in addition to providing medical care for youngsters privately referred to the group, she

Clinic Record

League members are justifiably proud of the initial record of the clinic which is staffed by resident physicians of the hospital, pediatricans and consulting specialists. Howard B. Hatfield, administrator of the hospital, reports that during the past 12 months 65 patients were accepted for service and 48 cases were given advice on medical care.

And he explains the opera-tion of the clinic this way: Before patients are accepted, Mrs. Irma Hall, social service worker at the hospital, takes their case history to determine the parents' financial prob-lems. Patients eligible for county care are sent there, and ones who are able to pay for medical attention are di-rected to private physicians. Although free and open to any youngster, the clinic chiefly serves residents of Long Beach, Lakewood, Artesia, Paramount and Bellflower who are usual-ly referred by school nurses

Often parents ask for only temporary medical help during a slack period.

Many of the patients, who range from birth to 14 years old, require only a few visits to the offices, but when surgery or hospitalization is need-ed, the league is ready to help again if the parents are un-able to assume the financial responsibility.

Besides paying for operating costs, members donate time at the clinic which is open Friday mornings from 9 a, m. until noon. They some-times assist Mrs. Hall with any last minute case histories, but usually they entertain chil-dren in the waiting room with toys and help the medical staff by weighing and measuring the patients.

League Volunteers

League members provide that extra "civillan" contact before the youngster is examined by the doctor. This creates a feeling of security in both parents and the child, Mrs. Hall says in praise of the league's work.

Although the clinic is only officially opened on Friday mornings, the actual working days extend throughout the week, Mrs. Hall reserves Tuesdays for case interviews. And any extra appointments with specialists are fitted in at a convenient time, she adds.

Last year, seven pediatri-cians and 10 specialists be-sides staff doctors donated their services to treat the chil-

up The Showcase, a gift shop at the hospital which is staffed daily by members. The hundreds of dollars of profits are used to treat emergency and needy cases brought into the hospital other than the clinic, the president says. The league also has decorated the alcove in the pediatrics wing of the hospital, donated a wheel chair and television set. When the clinic was ready to move to large quarters this summer, organization contributed to buy new equipment needed.

Through the years various hospitals and clinics have received equipment from the league. The purchases of a rocking bed for Rancho Los Amigos and a special table for Tichenor Clinic are but a few examples of their generosity.

At each autumn general membership gathering a spe-cial guest speaker connected with children's work appears and as is the custom, a contribution is made to the or-ganization she represents. GAY LITTLE clowns and dolls bring a double joy. The little patients in the pediatrics wing which receive them will be happier and the money collected by the Children's Benefit League through their sale at the Showcase in Community Hospital will help provide medical care for other ill children. Forty-Niners Pan for 'Diamond Jim'

Diamond Jim, a fabulous character in the gay 90's, has been brought out of the musty archives to which he had been exited by the Associated Women's Student at Long Beach State College.

Diamond Jim will be selected from ellgible males nominated by various campus organizations. As a kicker to bring reluctant makes to the fore, an "immense" diamond stickpin will be presented to the winner at the AWS Formal "It's a Woman's World" on Nov. 5.

A success story is one that all of us like to read about, and some art students from State College are on their way. Bob Gromendyke, campus sign painter, won first award for his hand carved wooden bowl in the Young American Cratisman national annual competition in New York this summer, and a former colleague and his wife, Jack Ageacell, won honorable mention in last week's art show here.

Douglas MucFadden now has a one-man show in the Los Angeles County Medical Bldg, and is opening his own 'shop here in town. Ray Hein won the National Hickok Award and his designs are now being produced on men's jewelry and belt buckles.

One of the busiest clubs on campus is the Newman Club. Representatives will journey today to Los Angeles to attend the Newman Leadership Conference, and then next Friday trek to Santa Ana for a regional Halloween dance. Goblin and ghost costumes are out for this crew. It's old-fashloned bathing suits, and rightly so for a bunch from the beach city.

Parents will get a break this Sunday, and members of the Delta Delta Delta sorority are giving it to them. The parents of sorority members are being entertained at the student lounge from 3 to 5 p. m. A dessert will be served, and the main topic of discussion will be the organizational structure of Tri Delta.

Friendship, help and encouragement is being given to the patients of the Norwalk State Hospital by members of Psi Chi, national honorary fraternity in psychology. A group of volunteers from the club go to the hospital once a month to participate in a program of recreation and entertainment for the patients in the wards. The program is sponsored by the Red Cross.

A "Glasses for Unfortunate Classes" week will be held at State College soon, and the Home Economics Club does not mean drinking glasses, rather the kind that lie around the house in secluded nooks collecting dust, and that cause you to say when you see them, "I wonder what I keep those for?" The old eye glasses, rims and frames will be sent overseas for those people who can't afford to see without help.

Regular guys will be getting together Nov. 5 and 6 when Sigma Alpha Epsilon representatives congregate here for the installation of the new fraternity chapter at State College. San Diego State, UCLA, USC, Occidental College and Santa Barbara all will be represented at the installation of the 137th Chapter of SAE.

Pledges only, will be the order of the night Oct. 31, and to celebrate the eve of goblins and ghosts will be a spook dance given by the Delta Zeta pledges. All of the pledges of the nine Greek organizations are invited to the dance. As for the actives, they'll just have to find a house to haunt for their amusement.

Long Spades Nurse Trumps in Glow of Candlelight

Today's hand continues our series on the management of trump suit. When the opponents hammer away at your trumps with their long suit, you must sometimes counter by developing long suits of your own.

West opens the six of diamonds, and you allow East to win the first trick with the queen of diamonds. If East is foolish enough to switch to a different suit you will be delicated.

East returns another diamond, however, and you take your ace. You cannot blithely lead trumps to force out the nec. West would refuse the first two trumps but would take the third trump and go back-to diamonds. This would diamonds to say nothing of East's top spades.

Instead of touching the trumps you lead the jack of spades at the third trick. East wins with the queen of spades and must return something or other. What can East do to hurt you?

Assume that East returns a trump (as good as any other defense). You win in dummy and lead another spade. East takes the ace of spades. He can allow West to ruff a spade now, but you can afford that trick.

East's best chance is to return a second trump. West holds off again, and you win in dummy once more. You must now abandon the trumps in order to lead your good cards in spades and clubs. There are now two trumps out against you, and you are quite willing to let the enemy make tricks with both of them.

When so me body ruffs a spade or a club, you will have two trumps while the enemy will have only one trump. You are sure to keep control of the hand, losing only two spades, two trumps, and one diamond.

Church Women Slate World Day Nov. 4

"Hey, Mom, what's to cat?"—a well-known after-noon theme song in our American household. Fortu-nately there's the cookie jar, the refrigerator, stocked with fruit and milk—to say nothing of the meat ready for the evening meal.

This is life in America—or at least in most of America. Quite different the scenes in more than half the households of the world where the cries of hunger of children haunt the hearts of mothers and fathers. fathers.

With the bellef that freedom and prosperity can be assured any nation only as it is assured all, United Church Women the nation over have set Friday, Nov. 4, as World Community Day and for its theme have chosen "Give us this day our daily bread." Long Beach United Church Women will gather for their meeting at the First Methodist Church beginning at 10:30 a, m. and continuing till 3 p. m.

p. m.
The church for many years has been trying to help answer the prayer as suggested by the theme of the day as it has sent missionaries not only has sent missionaries not only to take spiritual food but the help and "know how" to produce more and greater variety of physical food. Even when our government joined to help it was not possible to meet all the overwhelming problems of want in the world. The only robution segmed for nations to nations agreed to work unitedly for freedom from want and the Food and Agriculture or-ganization was born.

Because United Church
Women have faith in the high purpose of FAO, they have spotlighted it for study on this 1955 nationwide observance of World Community Day, just as it spotlighted the World Health organization at the World Community Day meeting last year.

Another need to be met is that of clothing for our World refugees and this year's material project is "Parcels for Men and Boys"—clothing for those youth and men in countless numbers who are now less numbers who are now slipping across the border to West Germany and freedom. West Germany and freedom. A suit, shirt or overcont can make the difference between a delinquent and a useful citizen with a job. Such material gifts along with money (8 cents per pound) to pay for handling through Church World Service can bring us a pace nearer peace—for this the United Church Women over the nation will meet on Nov. 4 to rededicate themselves to helping to bring about peace in the world.

Attend Conclave

By ANGELO PATRI

On every hand we hear of a teacher shortage, and any mention of it brings the wondering look and the innocent inquiry, "But why? They have such short hours, only five-day weeks, long summer vacations—you'd think they'd jump at it."

Well, they're not jumping just that way, as one can easily see. Why?

Salaries are none too high. Some are disgracefully low. But while that accounts for part of the reluctance of young people to take on the teacher's responsibilities, it is not by any means the chief one. A good salary never made a good teacher a better one, nor a root one a good one had a poor one a good one, but it does go a long way toward strengthening the spirit of a teacher and that is the im-portant factor in this reluc-tance to teach. The teachers' spiritual needs are ignored

A teacher is an ordinary human being with all of a human being with all of a human being's hungers, ambitions, emotions and responses to experiences. This plain fact has been overlooked, often and completely. A teacher has educated and trained for his nost. Otherwise he could not educated and trained for his post. Otherwise he could not be appointed. That education, that professional training, is ignored the day he takes his place in a classroom. He is bound, tied, gagged by the rules. He is not only told what he can teach, which is to a degree essential, but he is told when and how, exactly, he is to teach it.

It is as though he came to his task as unprepared as an infant. This is a shock, a spiritual shock to one who was graduated in the pride of ac-complishment. He thought he was a teacher but he learns was a teacher ,but he learns is is only a transmitter of another's power. Power, and it is power over him, is away downtown in "The Office," Would you want to feel that you had no say about what was needed to do your work? Would you want to have to work through and around and about orders that thwarted your day's work? Many a teacher faces just that situation.

Then there is the matter of criticism. Fault-finding is a better term. Anybody, anybetter term. Anybody, any-body at all, can tell a teacher what is the matter with him and everybody does, and the pedagogue has little means of defense. If he wants to com-plain he soon learns the uselessness of it. He must first go to the assistant principal, then to the principal, then to the assistant superintendent—finally, if he still has the will, to the superintendent, then to the Board. There he discovers that he is "uncooperative." To Be uncooperative is to sin sgainst the Educational Code. That's bad for the teacher's future.

It is not just low salary, crowded classes, poor equip-ment—though they all count. It is the dignity and worth of a human being that is at stake here. A teacher needs to feel responsible, appreciated, free in spirit. Given that, he will manage the rest.

He Should Show More Restraint

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I am a girl of 15 and faced with a very serious problem. It might affect my whole fu-ture at least the romantic side of my future.

of my future.

Here is the way it is. I have been going with Dan for about three months now and we have been seeing a alot of each other. Well, last night we were watching television with my family and he put his arms around me and started hugging and kissing me in front of my whole family. This has never happened before, so it surprised me as well as them.

Later when he had gone mother said if that was the way he was going to act he could stay at home. This hurt me a lot because I've been planning on going to football games and all sorts of place with him and now she says I can't because of his hugging and kissing me. and kissing me.

I love this boy very much and he loves me and because of school we hardly ever get a chance to see each other, and I can't see what harm there is in his kissing me in front of my folks.

I'm afraid if I speak to him about this he'll be mad and want to break off with me. But, on the other hand, I know my family won't let him come here unless he keeps "hands off,"

Youthful Minister Lauded for His Beautiful Sermon

BY DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Mark Anthony showed that a funeral sermon should list

a funeral sermon should list some of the specific good deeds of the departed. His unselfish-ness and kindliness should be stressed, for those positive virtues are a solace to the family and an inspiration to the living friends.

Relevant quotations from Psalms and the Gospels, as John 14:1-3, are an ideal inclusion, but don't recite scripture exclusively for the entire service. For a recital is never an oration! Every sermon should be an oration of a special, examplifies and to larging underlistic sort to larging and evangelistic sort to inspire and uplift men.

Rev. Busacca's father and the latter's boyhood friend, came over to America from Italy, where they were boys studying for the priesthood. Somehow they got switched to the Evangelical United Brethren degelical United Brethren de-nomination.

So, Rev. Busacca's father now occupies a pulpit in Wis-consin and this talented 29-year-old son is following in his father's footsteps. And he is a great credit to the pulpit.

Case P-378: Rev. Dwight Busneen, aged 29, is pastor of the Memorial E. U. B. church in Milwaukee, Wis.

Mrs. Crane and I were there to attend the funeral of Dan Stair, who had been a neigh-bor of mine at Fort Wayne, Ind., 40 years ago. We sat through the funeral service in the church sanctuary.

"That's the most beautiful funeral service I have ever heard," Mrs. Crane whispered to me, at its conclusion.

Rev. Busacca briefly mentioned Mr. Stair and his posi-tive personality. He told us about his laventive genius and many patents. Then he cited his constructive work in the community, and finally shifted over to the usual reference from St. John wherein Jesus

It was a very dignified and personalized sermon, that inspired everybody in the congregation. And it fulfilled the formula for an ideal funeral sermon, which demands:

(1) Personal mention of the deceased in a laudable manner so that the audience can be inspired by his good deeds or community efforts;

(2) Assurance to the family of the eternal life with the further reenforcement of their faith by use of Christ's positive promise in St. John 14:1.3:

(3) A 10-minute inspirational message for everybody to exalt the soul and lift people momentarily from this mun-dane world into a brief glimpse of eternal verities. A funeral should be a clergy-A funeral should be a ciergy-man's greatest evangelistic op-portunity for at that time many old reprohates and others who have drifted far-from their ethical childhood moorings are back in the fa-miliar church news.

A clergyman thus has a very unique audience. He gets undivided attention from people who may never be in a church again. So he should uplift them by a 15-minute dignified sermon, and take them up to the ten of the mentain as Moses. top of the mountain, as Moses went of old, so they can obtain a momentary glimpse into heaven. A good funeral sermon should also contain specific references to the departed so the congregation will know whether it is a man, woman or child. Some services are so vague, the listeners don't even know who is in the casket.

ROSE FRANKEN

THE HUNCH THAT PAID OFF

by Rose Franken

NOVELIST, magazine writer and playwright Rose Franken, best known for her "Claudia" stories, has just had her latest novel, Intimate Story, published by Doubleday & Ca.

Most people scoff at following hunches. So did I — before I realized that no matter how idiotic it seemed at the time, blind obedience to an impulse has often worked out to be right. I can't say that I have had a perfect score, but for the most part it really has.

There was one day in February, 1942, that I shall never forget because it was the time that I acted most like a complete idiot in following a hunch.

The day began with a light fall of snow near Old Lyme, Conn., where my husband, Bill, and I were running our 1,000-acre farm in between writing stories. Over breakfast, we listened to the radio interspersing music with post-Pearl Harbor news and warnings to motorists to avoid driving in the blizzard that was blanketing New England.

There was nothing immediate to worry about. Bill was driving over to the state university at Storrs to get some farming advice, and later in the day we expected my oldest son, Paul, to drive down from Quincy, Mass., where he was stationed as an Army lieutenant after having enlisted upon graduation from college.

I am a worrier, so I was a little hesitant about letting Bill drive to Storrs; but he laughed at me and went to get into his heavy clothes. "I'm worried about Paul," I called to him. Bill came clumping in in his heavy boots. "If you have nothing better to do than worry, go ahead," he said. "Paul knows how to take care of himself." With that, he went outside to get his car from the garage.

Then Came on Impulse

I looked out. The wind was whipping the snow into small drifts across the road and in the corners of the barnyard. The phone rang. It was Paul. "Don't worry, Mother," his voice came over the wire. "[7] leave about 4:00 this afternoon and be down tonight." But as I put the phone down, an overpowering impulse to drive up to Paul — over 100 miles away — came over me.

Bill came in to kiss me goodbye. "I won't be here when you get back," I heard myself saying. "You'll find something for your lunch. I'm going to Quincy." Bill blinked. "Why!" he asked incredulously. Then he called me all sorts of a lunatic. "I ought to divorce anybody as crazy as you," he said. "Those hunches! Well, I know I can't stop you and I can't let you go alone. Come on."

We drove through one of the worst storms I have ever seen in my life, with the snow so thick that at times it blotted out the road. "Why am I doing this?" I asked Bill. "Because you're a loon," he snapped. It was pitch black and we were half frozen when we got to Quincy. A soldier went to find Paul.

Paul came from his quarters. "What are you doing here?" he yelled. "I told you I'd be down. I was just getting ready to leave!" Bill pointed to me: "Your Mother..."

We started to talk. Then a soldier handed Paul a message. He said shortly, "We're alerted. Leaves are canceled."

We spent 15 minutes with him and drove back alone. Bill didn't talk. "I wish I were as crazy as you," he finally said as we reached home. "It takes a lot of courage."

We didn't see Paul again for five years. A few days later, he shipped out — one of the first sent to New Guinea.

ANYTHING COMES!

If nobody else wants it, this man gets it—usually, that is

by DICK EMMONS

Possibly you don't know the proverb, He who accepts graciously will be given much. I happen to know it because I just made it up. I am dedicating it to my wife, Helen, a girl who is in personal competition with the city dump.

The other night I came home from the office in my usual state of exhaustion, reached out to the girl for her sympathetic kiss and tripped over an unseen object.

"What's this?" I asked with forced interest, picking myself up.

"That? Why, a pedestal for a birdbath, of course," Helen said cheerily. "Nancy Frohm was going to throw it away, but then at the last minute she asked if we could use it."

"Use it!" I said. "Boy, oh, boy! We've been desperate for a birdbath pedestal around here for years!"

"That's what I thought," Helen nodded solemnly. "Remember the time the Denningers gave me the lid to their trash can because Fred ran over the can and they were going to buy a new one? Well, there you have the birdbath. Just solder it to the pedestal and the birds will never know the difference."

"Well, maybe some of the brighter birds..." I let my voice trail off, wondering idly where Helen's willing acceptance of discarded items would lead us.

The very next day it led me downtown in an attempt to buy a bookend to match one given her by Amy Fitzgerald. When I got home, I was in no mood for pleasantries.

"Find it?" Helen asked pleasantly.

"Find it?" I snarled. "It's a common style. But I learned something that may interest you. You can't buy one bookend. You have to pay for two. You can eat the second one or hide it in the attic or throw it away, but you still pay for two!"

"Three bookends are better than one," Helen said softly, "Someday somebody will give me the fourth."

I groaned. "What I'm trying to say is that you've got to stop accepting these things. No civilized home has to put up with three matching bookends!"

"Yes, dear," Helen said.

In the days that followed I began to hope that my brief lecture had struck its mark. Only the old, tired objects greeted me each night as I straggled in.

"I haven't seen any new, tired objects around lately," I remarked just last Friday. "Dare I assume that this condition is permanent? Or have our friends stopped offering us their castoffs?"

"Well —" Helen eyed me with what I took to be doubt. "You do want me to turn them down, don't you?"

"Absolutely," I said, "Always. On every occasion. If they don't want it, it's not good enough for us."

A Lesson Well Learned

Helen brightened. "Thank goodness. Those were the very words I said to Janice this morning when she came over to ask if you'd be interested in buying Phil's golf clubs for some ridiculous price like $25. He's giving the game up."

"Phil's matched irons," I breathed, "and the set of woods he bought last spring. Was that what you let slip through your pretty fingers?"

"I guess so," Helen yawned. "Anyway. Ianice called later and told me she'd gotten a lot more money from somebody else."

I shook my head, dazed at the unreliability of women. Then I sat down stiffly, staring vacantly into space. Like a bookend.

I TRAVELED 16,000 MILES IN AFRICA

Here's how an American college graduate, with a minimum of cash and a clever idea,

THE AUTHOR, a 28-year-ald New Yorker, wound up his career at Cornell University with a Master of Science degree, practically no cash and an irresistible desire to see the world. He "promoted" enough money to get across the Atlantic and back, then lit out for Africa via France and the Mediterranean. Now back in America, he currently is doing graduate work at the University of Michigan.

by MURRAY MELBIN

On November 24, 1953, I landed in Oran with my 70-pound rucksack on my back. I started south into Africa on a trail that led haphazardly across mountains and deserts, jungles and savannas, rivers and swamps. The map at right shows my route through 24 countries.

I traveled by camel, airplane, mule, bicycle, car, truck, ocean steamer, riverboat, dugout canoe, motorcycle and railroad — plus 600 miles on foot, wearing out two pairs of shoes in the process. I met Tuareg desert tribesmen, witch doctors, Mau Mau, pygmies, cliff dwellers and saucer-lipped native women. Sometimes I fasted for days, sometimes I feasted on land snails, monkey meat and crocodile steaks.

One year after I left Oran, I wound up in Alexandria, Egypt (where I climaxed the trip with a bout of malaria). I had covered 16,000 miles at a cash outlay of exactly $27.61.

1 did it with my little, second-hand, $47 camera—the kind that snaps a picture and hands over a print 60 seconds later. It had struck me that with such quick prints I could bargain for transportation and lodging. And I was right. (I also took along a 35-mm. camera and 30 rolls of film.)

Here are bargains I got for my 60-second pictures: a 725-mile airlift from Nairobi, Kenya, to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia — value $80; a 1,272-mile airlift from Asmara, Eritrea, to Cairo, Egypt — value $120; a bus ride from Cairo to Alexandria, plus two handengraved copper trays — value $150; a three-day stay at the exclusive Safari House in Arusha, Tanganyika — value $18.30; four rare thorn carvings from Nigeria — value $12.

And here are moments that stick in my memory:

THRILL RIDE: At Oran I hitched a ride on a big sixwheeled truck loaded with grain, bicycles and wines, bound for Colomb Bechar, an oasis on the northern edge of the Sahara. Heading south at dusk on a dirt track across the Atlas Mountains, we had just cleared the crest of a pass and started downhill when the air brakes conked out.

When we hit the first hairpin turn, the truck started to skid. Smoke curled from under the dashboard and our lights went out. To see the road, the driver had to lean out and steer with one hand.

At the next turn he skidded the truck to cut down our speed, then hurtled on as we hit the straightaway. He did it again... again. There came a turn where the truck skidded toward the edge of the cliff, then for a second stopped completely. In that second I flung myself out of the cab, somehow spotted a watermelon-sized rock and shoved it under the rear wheels. The truck inched forward, rock and all. Then it stopped.

The driver crawled out of the smoking cab and sank to the ground beside me. We silently shook hands. Eventually he got the air-brake system working again and we drove on toward Colomb Bechar.

MAGICIAN'S HELPER: The day I arrived at the oasis, the whole village was talking about Kassagi, a famous Tunisian magician who had come to give a show. Later that day I found myself sitting next to him in a cafe.

In broken French 1 said: "I have heard, sir, that you are a magician."

Without a word Kassagi flicked his right hand. A ball appeared between his fingers, then two, then one again. Smilingly he showed me his empty palms.

"If you will come with me into the sunlight," I said, "I will show you a different kind of magic." Outside I snapped his picture, and during the 60 seconds it developed I kept talking to him in my halting French. Then I whipped out his photograph. Staring at it openmouthed for a moment, Kassagi promptly invited me to join his act that night. He had rented the cafe for his show, and at the climax of the performance he introduced me as a guest magician from America. My trick, he said, was le photographie-express, the fast photograph.

I snapped a picture of a young Arab-boy seated in a chair onstage, peeled it off one minute later and held it up for all to see. The cafe rang with shouts of el hamdullah! — Praise be to God! Kassagi was so delighted with my performance that he paid for my board and room for the next three days.

RED CARPET: An open-hearted host was Chief Ogiozughannwen of the ancient Nigerian village of Benin. My Polatoid picture of him left him speechless with surprise. When he recovered, he had servants prepare sleeping quarters for the "big stranger." Although these included a bed with spotless sheets covered by mosquito netting, the Chief apologized for not being able to do better for such a VIP guest.

Every meal was a feast, and there were enormous quantities of everything. There was ground nut soup, corned beef in palm soup, boiled yams, fufu (a dish of pounded plantain and highly spiced sauce), goose eggs, antelope meat, chicken, roast bananas, papaya and beer. We sat solemnly facing each other on straw mats. A small boy cooled me with a leather fan waved from a respectful distance, and a corps of servants knelt whenever I took a drink.

DR. MEIBIN, I PRESUME: In a Belgian Congo village I watched the ritual of the second-burial ceremony. It was being held for the wife of the tribal chief, who had died two years before. Now it was necessary to bury her spirit, so that it would not wander about the forest, making trouble.

The men of the tribe were sitting in a group around an elder, who was chanting a culogy. At intervals they would respond in chorus. I sat down quietly among the mourners, who at first paid no attention to me whatever. The mosquitoes began to bite. I dug into my bag for insect repellent and put it on my face and hands. Soon several mourners noticed that the insects were leaving me alone.

Even though the burial ceremony was still going on, an old man got up and came over to me. He saluted, showed me a large festering sore on his finger and indicated that he wanted some of my "medicine." I tried vainly to explain that this medicine would do him no good; then, to get rid of him, I made an "applicator" out of a sliver of palm-leaf stem and daubed the repellent on the man's sore. I gave him the wet stick. He smelled it, nodded and saluted again.

I had evidently been elected Medicine Man on the spot, for in another few minutes about a dozen tribesmen had formed a line, quietly waiting to be treated. They were afflicted with an assortment of sores, carbuncles, cuts and infections. In my best professional manner, I carefully examined each case and used a fresh palm twig applicator on every patient. Business boomed at my impromptu open-air clinic for about half an hour. Then I ran out of patients.

FAIR EXCHANGE: In Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, I walked into the office of the local newspaper and told the editor how I had got there. Then I showed him my hole-ridden shoes. I had "spares" — moccasins — but I needed stout shoes to walk on. Could I trade a pair for the story of my trip so far? He said yes — and I still have the clipping to prove it.

LUXURY: In Tanganyika I met George Dove, a white hunter who was about to take three Australians to the Serengeti Plains on a sightseeing safari, It was costing them $300 apiece for the week's trip; but I offered Dove his picture for a chance to go along.

He smiled incredulously and said: "You Yanks are crazy. Tell you what, though. I'll take you along if you give my clients pictures of themselves."

I did, and we set out in an open station wagon. We saw more than 30,000 head of magnificent wild game at close range — a leopard, spitting and snarling in the grass five feet away, antelope covering 40 feet in a single, graceful leap, lions closing in on a wildebeest for their evening meal. With two cookboys busy, we feasted like diners in a plush city restaurant.

FLIES BY DAY: At one point in Tanganyika I was crossing an immense plain alone. There wasn't a sign of another living being — nothing but a limitless waste of scrubby trees and tall grass.

I soon found out why humans avoid this section of East Africa. It is the lair of the deadly tsetse fly, carrier of sleeping sickness. Black and about the size of honey bees, the flies cluster on leafless bushes alongside a trail and attack anything that moves.

There were only a few at first. Then they were on me in a buzzing swarm, stinging like a thousand redhot needles. Flailing my arms to fight them off, I started to run. The sun beat down and sweat ran into my eyes in burning rivulets. I gasped for breath. I tried to run faster, tore up handfuls of grass to beat off the flies — in vain.

Finally, in sheer desperation, I flung down my pack and raced for an open clearing. There, dizzy and panting, I stood still. And there the flies suddenly left me.

When I got my breath, I cautiously retrieved my pack and dashed on. Instantly the flies closed in. But now, over a small rise, I spied a clump of trees beside a road. In the shade was a group of natives, apparently waiting for a truck to pick them up. I ran to them—and collapsed.

WITCHCRAFT: In lower Nigeria I visited a witch doctor. Natives there believe implicitly in "juju," the power of evil spirits. Even whites in Africa say: "I don't necessarily believe it, but there are things I can't explain."

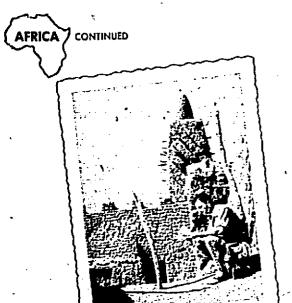

The witch doctor gave me palm wine, first tasting it to show it wasn't poisoned. Then he showed me a wooden head with 200 porcupine quills stuck in it. With this magic, he said, you could make your enemy many miles away feel the pain of the needles.

Then, moistening his hands, he touched my head and invoked a multiple blessing! Honored ancestors, good health, my house untouched, my children protected. As I am unmarried and have no children, I shall have to wait and see about the fourth blessing.

His route traversed 24 countries: Algeria, French Sudan, Upper Volta, Gold Coast, Togo, Dahomey, Nigeria, Cameroons, Tchad, Ubangi-Chari, Belgian Congo, Angola, both the Rhodesias, Mozambique, Nyasaland, Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi, Uganda, Kenya, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Sudan and finally Egypt.

TIMBUKTU: Using a time exposure, Melbin snaps himself by a mud house in the "middle of nawhere" himself by a mud house in the french Sudan.

—deep in the desert wastes of the French Sudan.

GUEST ARTIST: At a tribal ceremony in a Nigerian village, the drum rhythms move Melbin to join the dancers. "It was poor dancing," the author reports frankly, "but when I finished they cheered."

TELEGRAM: Pounding a slit hollow log, a native flashes word that a white man is coming. One such message preceded Melbin for a full 12 miles.

MELBIN UNCORKED MOSQUITO CHASER, BECAME A CONGO MEDICINE MAN

CLOSEST SHAVE: With camera cocked, I crept close to the shore of Lake Edward in Uganda, where hippopotamuses flocked by the hundreds. I happened to glance over my shoulder. About 300 yards away, headed straight toward me, was a huge black elephant.

Turning, I hurried to where I had left my pack. I was pretty sure the elephant hadn't seen me, but I didn't know what he would do if he had. I kept running toward the road a quarter of a mile away.

Suddenly, directly ahead, was another elephant—and we were heading straight for each other. Off to the right behind this one I saw three more. Again I turned, only to find I was headed back toward the lake and the hippos. I was trapped.

I tested for wind direction with a wetted finger and found it was blowing directly between the first elephant and the second group of four. There was no other way to go. As I sprinted forward, downwind, the second group stopped and sniffed suspiciously.

My pack bounced like a pile driver on my back and I thought my heart would burst. Gasping for breath I reached the road, then looked back. The five elephants had joined forces, but the wind had been in my favor: all five were ambling peacefully toward the river bank.

SURPRISE: "I don't think you'll get anything out of them. They're a tough outfit, but you can try."

In Cairo, where I was trying to get a free bus ride to Alexandria, a friendly Egyptian was talking to me about the Societé des Autobus de Routes du Desert. Trading with the natives in the hinterlands, he pointed out, was one thing; but bargaining with the cost-conscious director of a modern bus company in Cairo was quite another. I decided to give it a try.

Armed with a photo of a street vendor serving drinks to his line's passengers, I called on Monsieur Kfoury, the director. He listened impassively to my story but finally agreed to accept the picture in lieu of fare. When I mentioned I would like to shop in Cairo for some souvenirs, he assigned one of his Arabic-speaking aides to help me bargain.

Although it meant spending more money than I had planned, I let the aide bargain for two handengraved copper trays. Just as I was about to pay, my companion said: "Put your money away. These are a gift from the company."

LAST STOP: I arrived home in New York in December 1954. Having already worn out the shoes I had promoted in Southern Rhodesia, I slogged home through the snow in my moccasins.

If you have the urge to make a trip like mine, let me offer some advice. Plan your itinerary for half the time you actually allow yourself. Then you will be able to take leisurely side trips.

Learn as much as you can about the areas beforehand from books and by talking to people who have! been there. The best maps are Bartholomew's and Michelin. The most important items in your rucksack will be your canteen, sewing kit, Boy Scout knife and first-aid kit. A sleeping bag made of a sewn-up sheet will give you clean, lightweight comfort.

Don't take containers; wrap breakable items in clothing. Things I took and later got rid of included a mirror, cooking gear, books and emergency rations. If you have any doubts about your day-to-day need for an item, don't take it; you'll find it when you need it. Keep clean-shaven for the sake of making good impressions and for your own morale.

In some localities I found people suspicious of me because some rucksack-toting hitch-hiker had passed through before and had soured them with his arrogance and lack of manners. You must, above all, be considerate and courteous. If a friendly, open attitudedoesn't come naturally to you, don't go.

Actually, it would be wise to carry more than $27. But for getting along on a shoestring, the camerabargain plan is the best I know.

LAST LOOK: Winding up his 16,000-mile jount in Egypt, Melbin follows in the tracks of thousands of other tourists, views the Sphinx of Giza.

Last year, when producer Samuel Goldwyn bought the screen rights to the Broadway smash hit, Guys and Dolls, he gave the top price ever paid for a film property: $1,000,000. The production has been pretty unorthodox ever since.

First, Goldwyn signed Joseph L. Mankiewicz, a four-time Academy Award winner who never had handled a musical comedy, to write the screenplay and direct Guys and Dolls.

Then, for the romantic leads, he hired Marlon Brando (at $200,000), who never had sung or danced professionally, and Jean Simmons (at $100,000), a British-born dramatic actress. Marlon was east as gambler Sky Masterson, so named in the picture because of his willingness to bet on anything; Jean got the role of Sgt. Sarah Brown of the Save-a-Soul Mission, young, pretty and dedicated to her work. Goldwyn further announced that both stars would do their own singing. Said Brando:

"My voice sounds like the mating call of a dying yak, but if Mr. Goldwyn has the gall to put it on the screen I'm willing to try it."

For three months thereafter, Marlon studied under Leon Cepparo, the vocal coach who had instructed him for his Shakespeare debut in Julius Caesar. As a result, moviegoers will be pleasantly surprised by Brando's rich baritone in his principal number, Luck Be a Lady Tonight.

But Frank is a born scrapper. Once he believes right is on his side, he will take on anyone or anything. During the course of this production he took on two formidable foes, Sam Goldwyn and television's famous emece, Ed Sullivan.

of Guys and Dolls. Sullivan offered Goldwyn $32,000, hoping no doubt that Sam would prevail on the film's stars to contribute their talents in the spirit of sales promotion.

When Sinatra heard of this, he reacted violently: Sullivan, he claimed, had "tried

THE STORY OF 'GUYS AND DOLLS'

Based on characters and a story by the late Damon Runyon, the picture closely follows the tremendously successful stage musical of the same title. The scene is New York, Gambler Nathan Detroit is engaged to Miss Adelaide, a night-club dancer who greatly wishes to be married but objects to Nathan's running a floating crap game. To get money for a place to hold the game, Nathan bets another gambler, Sky Masterson, that he cannot persuade a pretty mission lassie, Sarah Brown, to go to Havana with him. Sky does it; then, having fallen in love with Sarah, denies his success and pays off on his bet. Despite complications, everything works out and both couples get married at high noon in Times to put pressure on top studio officials to get me to appear for free on Toast of the Town. ... I get $25,000 for a personal appearance, and Sullivan offered only $32,000 for the entire package."

Sullivan promptly wrote to the Screen Actors Guild, saying that to date his show had paid out $5,000,000 to performers and that he had approached Goldwyn, not Sinatra, on the Guys and Dolls project. He also reprinted the entire letter in a paid trade-paper advertisement. Sinatra then rebutted with a full-page advertisement in Variety: "Dear Ed, You're sick. Frankie...P.S. Sick, sick, sick,"

Although this exchange of advertisements nettled practically all the top echelon concerned with the picture—and produced no TV preview— it had scant effect upon Sinatra's work. Vivian Blaine, the only top name retained from the original Broadway east, says, "Frank was very easy to work with, largely because we established a kind of instantaneous rapport. It was the kind of thing I had with Sam Levene, who played the Nathan Detroit part in the stage show. And

1 never thought I'd find it again. But Frank is such a darn' good professional that it was a cinch working with him."

WHAT'S 'DOLL' IN ARABIC?

Because the title Guys and Dolls means little or nothing to foreign moviegoers, Loew's International, which is distributing the film overseas, had to translate it into different languages. This created problems, particularly with the word "doll," which has more than one meaning even in English. Anyway, here's what came out:

In Germany, Guys and Dolls becomes Schwere Jungen — Leichte Maedchen, or Tough Guys — Light-hearted Girls.

In France: Blanches Colombes et Villains Messieurs, or White Doves and Tough Guys. In Spain: Ellos y Ellas, literally Hes and Shes

In Arabic, the title reads This Woman is Mine; in Swedish, Angels of Broadway; in Siamese, Made for Each Other; and in Hebrew, The Boys and the Attractive, Easygoing Girls — a title, it is safe to say, that will fit no theater marquee in the world.

Altogether, there are 18 songs (by Frank Loesser) and dances (by Michael Kidd) in the film. All but three songs were in the original Broadway score. The newcomers are Pet Me, Poppa (which replaces A Bushel and a Peck), the abovementioned Adelaide and A Woman in Love, a duet by Brando and Simmons. Since the picture runs 234 hours, three good numbers were cut from the score: My Time of Day, More 1 Cannot Wish You and Marry the Man Today.

The most effective vocalist in the picture is Vivian Blaine, who vents her emotional frustration in two hilarious numbers: Take Back Your Mink and Adelaide's Lainent.

A native of Newark, N. J., where she was christened Vivian Stapleton, the perky blonde has been an integral part of Guys and Dolls since it opened on Broadway five years ago. After 1,200 Broadway performances as Miss Adelaide, Vivian played the same part on the road and in London. When Sam Goldwyn caught the show abroad, he confided to his wife that Vivian was "the one member of the cast we've got to get." Result: she steals the show.

After the film's completion in Hollywood this past July, Vivian and two other original-cast members — Sam Levene and Bob Alda — joined forces again at the Royal Nevada Hotel in Las Vegas, where an abbreviated version of Guys and Dolls currently is playing to the tourists and week-end gamblers. Meanwhile the picture will be opening soon in New York and Chicago, then around the country. From all appearances, it will return producer Goldwyn's investment — about $5,500,000 altogether — with interest.

New Life for Old

Teamwork in Portland, Me., stops

Just south of this city's bustling business district, long-time residents now paint their picket fences and putter in flower beds with undisguised neighborhood pride. As recently as five years ago, no one bothered. But now, as the pictures at left show, yesterday's tumbledown houses rear straight and stalwart, gleaming in bright new paint, and a new spirit hangs over the 20-block neighborhood.

For this is the showcase of one of the nation's more vigorous campaigns to stamp out slums before they get started—and an example worth copying in your city. Eye-catching as they are, the splashes of new paint are only frosting on the cake. The more drastic changes—stout new stairways, modern fixtures, an almost hygienic cleanliness—lie behind those once-crumbling walls. The program's success can be measured only in terms of health, safety and community pride.

Portland's war on slums has been a community project, first to last. It began in 1948, when the Portland Press-Herald and Evening Express shocked local readers with vivid photos and stories of decay amounting almost to squalor. The papers' steady drumfire led to formation of a 14-member Citizens' Housing Committee. The group plumped strongly for a program of neighborhood face-lifting.

Then City Hall's young, aggressive team of Dr. Edward Colby, health director, and Gordon E. (Pete) Martin, housing supervisor, drafted a housing code with teeth and enforced it with vigor. But the final push needed to put the program across came from residents themselves. Within a week after the code was passed by the City Council, homeowners were streaming to Martin's office to find out how they could comply with it.

Just what is the owner's (or the tenant's) role? When his area is chosen for rehabilitation (the program began with six blocks, now covers 20), he is invited to a meeting of residents and city officials. Dr. Colby and Martin outline the inspection law, explain its rock-bottom standards, then urge property owners to ignore the minimums and renovate from top to bottom. "

A few days after the meeting, Martin's inspectors invade the area armed with flashlights, detailed forms and an extraquantity of politeness. Since community cooperation is so important, the men are trained to inspect at the owner's convenience and to be as accommodating as possible. (Once, a home-owner refused to admit an inspector until he sang an Irish song. The inspector obliged with Γll Take You Home Again, Kathleen.) The house is combed from foundation to attic, with particular attention to structure, sanitation and ventilation.

Later, an owner may receive an official okay - or an order telling him to

But most owners are eager to fall in line. Sometimes, when repairs are expensive, Martin's agreeable men allow owners to spread the work over a long period. Occasionally they run afoul of an independent cuss who refuses to be told to remodel; he complies with the law and

How can your city hand together to stamp out the glacierlike creep of slums? Here and there, cities already have chalked up success with programs of "urban renewal"; and a national organization, ACTION (American Council To Improve Our Neighborhoods, Box 462, Radio City Station, New York 20, N.Y.), stands ready, with information and trained consultants, to help your city get started. For as Portland has learned, the hattle against decay benefits everyone. The results are counted in reduced disease, reduced delinquency and a shotin-the-arm for civic self-respect.

Ever since they were born, the teen-aged daredevils in these pictures have been circus minded. Here in the winter quarters of "The Greatest Show on Earth," they rub elbows with aerialists and animal trainers every day.

So when Bill Rutland-then athletic director at Sarasota High School-first dreamed up a student circus six years ago, the idea went over with a bang. The first show was held indoors, on a borrowed $600 and hand-medown equipment. Since then, the circus has prospered, now owns all its own rigging, ponies, concession stands, even shows a profit of more than $3,000 a year.

More than 200 children (most in high school but some as young as 6) take part, selected from more than 500 who try out each year. The kids care for the animals, rig high wires, strike the tents. Rehearsals begin indoors in September, move outdoors in January. Performances run four days in the

Surprisingly, only a handful (three this year) of performers come from circus families. But the circus is a big thing to these kids; one girl's family moved here from Montgomery, Ala., just so she could perform in an aerial act. And students still talk about the time a football star told the coach he was quitting. He said football practice was interfering with his circus work.

ROMAN-LADDER act shows the precision of these high-school performers. Several of them have gone on to regular circuses.

AMERICAN FAMILIES IN A BOOM YEAR-No. 4

DYNAMIC TEXAN Barney Holland poses on his office terrace. He designed the office building himself.

ONE MILLIONAIRE'S FAMILY:

FORT WORTH, TEX.

Barney Holland, the balding, blocky Texan above, could be called a symbol of the flush postwar years. He returned here from the Navy in 1946 with $4,000 saved; since then, he has pyramided his net worth to well over a million dollars, mostly in oil, trucks, tires and ranch land.

Barney is 35 and the archetype of the new millionaire, the modern Midas whose golden touch consists of an unshakable belief that the boom will go right on booming. (Barney's own opby SID ROSS and ED KIESTER timism runs so deep that he once owed $70,000 on a $300-a-month salary.) With the economy at new heights in 1955, Barney and his breed of new ty-coon are enjoying the best year on their books and see no reason to hedge their bete.

Aside from this resemblance around the bank account, however, Barney looks blessed little like a millionaire, the muchcaricatured Texas species or any other. He doesn't flash his wealth; his income, for tax purposes, is limited rigidly to $25,000 a year. He doesn't bluster; he is simple and straightforward. He doesn't drive a Cadillac, preferring a 1950 Buick, and, although he owns a 2,000-acre ranch, he never rides a horse.

Nor is his home life pretentious. Priscilla, his pretty blonde wife, suffers along without a mink coat, and his four lively children (Lindsay, 8; Barney, 6; Joe, 4; Ellen, 2½) romp around a green-shuttered $20,000 house which, while comfortable enough, is hardly luxurious. The family has one servant, a maid-of-all-

A millionaire who computes the cost of a washer may sound like a nickelnurser, but what this really reflects is an unbounded capacity for study, which Barney turns loose on every project, from the purchase of a washer to the sale of 200,000 gallons of gasoline. His favorite reading consists of economics, finance and banking textbooks. Two or three evenings a week, he pulls out an armchair study board, a souvenir of his days at Princeton, and covers yards of paper with figures on business deals. His knowledge of the tax laws, for example, would do credit to T. Coleman Andrews, Mr. Income Tax himself. In Barney's realm, nothing is left to chance.

Around Fort Worth, Barney has somewhat the reputation of a reckless plunger. He considers this unfair. "What nobody ever sees is the amount of work I do over this study board," he says. "I figure every angle and stack all the facts and figures in the back of my head. When I'm set for something, it may seem hazardous to them, but not to me."

bridled optimism, Barney has built up a small but substantial empire, most of it interlocking. His biggest firm, the Barney Holland Oil Co., wholesales Conoco gasoline, oil and accessories; its best customers are the 50-odd service stations Barney himself controls. (The company also owns a number of business properties, mostly leased out to automobile dealers.)

This gasoline is transported from a Holland-owned depot to Holland-owned stations via Holland-owned trucks of the Heart of Texas Trucking Co. (The arrangement sprang from Barney's homework: by paying Heart of Texas twice the going rate for transportation, Barney Holland Oil keeps out of a higher income-tax bracket—and the money comes back to the same place.) Likewise, the Holland chain of service stations buys tires from the Barney Holland Tire Co.

Then there are the lesser satellites—the Triangle Transport Co., another trucking firm, and Westport, Inc., a real-estate outfit in which Barney owns a one-fifth interest. He also owns some $15,000 in bank stock—"although I like to keep control of my own money"—and keeps as a kind of cushion some $3,500 in sound mining stock, which his mother bought for him with his Navy-pay.

In Barney's eye, the Lick Skillet Ranch at Idabel, Okla., in the Red River Valley, crowns his galaxy. Once, Barney considered ranching for a living; today, what salary he draws above his $25,000 (the trucking firm pays him a token $125 a month, the tire firm nothing) is siphoned into the ranch. Barney is building up his herds of Black Angus cattle (he now has 300 head) and plans to add sheep. Judging by land prices in the neighborhood, the ranch alone is worth roughly $1,000,000.

But the Lick Skillet is more than an investment: it wraps up business, pleasure and future. Barney, still hard at work and busier than millionaires who live on their dividends, uses the ranch as a retreat (it has neither radio nor telephone); the kids consider it almost a fairyland. Barney fishes, hunts, walks around surveying his land and thinks out business problems without pressure. Often he fills the house with guests — many of them his employes, for he believes in sharing his fortune with them.

de corps among his workers. "I know very well that I get more loyalty if they have a stake in the profits," he says. Part of this "profit-sharing" system is a substantial Christmas bonus. Barney also gives his men a chance to enter business for themselves. "That's the best pension plan I could give them," he declares.

Recently, one employe launched plans for a new shopping center — on land Barney found and bought for him. A service station in the center will buy Barney Holland Oil Co. products, and this is enough return for the boss.

It's not too many years since Barney himself was scraping by on $250 a month. True, his father (also named Barney) had an established business in the oil firm, but Barney started at the bottom as a truck driver and "general flunky." His first move after discharge was to marry Priscilla Bradford, a Smith College graduate whom he had met at Princeton on a football week end; they set up housekeeping in an $80-a-month garage apartment with some hand-medown furniture. The thing the Hollands remember best about those days was the way diet followed the day of the week ---Tuesday was beans day, Wednesday spaghetti day and so on.

Barney immediately turned his searching mind loose on his dad's business. Within a year he had a sweeping plan for reorganization. It got a cold shoulder, to say the least. "It looked like here was

Thwarted there, Barney's restless mind looked elsewhere. In 1948 he dipped into his savings for $800 and bought a service-station lease. He sold the inventory for $500, leased the station at a profit of $50 a month. Thus, for $300, he had upped his income $50 a month. A few months later he added a second station for $9,000. He-borrowed $6,000 of the money; payments were $100, rent was $125, so he profited $25 more a month.

About this time, Priscilla objected. He was raiding the savings for highly speculative ventures, she felt, Barney marshaled his facts, took out his lap board and showed her mathematically that no risk was involved. She has been his convinced booster ever since.

His father was less easily swayed, so more and more Barney turned to private real-estate operations. He sold his house at a $10,000 profit, bought a farm, traded it as down payment on the ranch, added to his network of service stations. Finally, in 1949, he quit his father's business.

His career on his own lasted roughly three months. Then his father's business associate fell ill, and Barney was asked to come back. "I agreed on two conditions," Barney says. "One, that I be accepted as an equal, not a junior, and two, that my salary be limited to $300 a month. I didn't want to lean on anybody. I wanted to prove I had the goods."

Barney got more than equal status; his dad gave him a free hand. The old plan for reorganization was dusted off, brought up to date and put to work. After much consultation (and many nights over the study board), the company changed its status from Conoco's agent to an oil wholesaler handling Conoco products. The string of gas stations was expanded. More property was purchased. Rental income zoomed from $2,000 to $40,000 a year. Sales jumped from 200,000 to 400,000 gallons a month. By 1952, Barney had spent more than a quarter of a million dollars to expand.

Millionaire Barney is still spending and he is still a whirlwind, with little time for fun by everyday standards. "Today," Barney says, "Conoco sales in Fort Worth are the highest per capita of any large city. in the U.S., and 75 per cent of these sales are due to the Barney Holland Oil Co." In addition to quarterbacking this sales campaign, Barney has taken time out for such projects as designing a new office building for the company (on the strength of a year of architecture in college) and running for City Council as an independent. (He won a two-year term, and is busily heckling his fellow councilmen to spend more to improve the city.)

The Hollands have few evenings to spend over the chess board, one of their favorite recreations. Reading is another pet, but Barney has little time for the Book-of-theMonth Club. (The Hollands have separate libraries; Barney runs to economics texts and new fiction, Priscilla's to history and biography.)

Then there are the social demands. The Hollands move in the more rarefied circles of Fort Worth society. Barney springs from a revered Texas family: an ancestor was the legendary Col. James Bowie, and an uncle was Frank Hawks, the famed flier, who used to bring Will Rogers to dinner at the Holland home. ("I remember sitting on the bed listening to him tell stories," Barney says. "He was funny as hell.") Priscilla, with a Park Ave. and New Canaan, Conn., background, is likewise society-bred, and the Hollands are seen often in Fort Worth's best places — the River Crest Country Club, the Ridgley Club, the Colonial Club.

"We know everybody all right," Barney admits. He himself, however, is not much for socializing; though amiable enough, he has to be almost dragooned into dressing up. As a result, he often stays home with the study board while Priscilla goes to concerts or to the theater in Dallas with friends.

Occasionally, the Hollands will hold a small, formal cocktail party, usually inviting seven to 10 couples - hardly millionaire-type high living.

With Flora to handle the housework. Priscilla divides her days between the children and volunteer work. She is active in the League of Women Voters, the Junior League and the women's auxiliary of All Saints Episcopal Church, Summers, when Lindsay and Barney aren't in school, she shepherds the children to a swimming pool or the zoo in her Ford station wagon.

Barney shies away from bringing up the children, leaving it mostly to Priscilla, and confesses openly that he's "a little afraid" of them. "I like them when they're wellbehaved," he says, "but otherwise they're kind of hard to take." Barney has never changed diapers or walked the floor with any of the children.

This is not due to a lack of devotion, by his standards. "When Priscilla takes the kids to Sunday School, and I lie in bed, don't think I'm asleep," he says. "I'm reading the want ads or figuring out some deal in my head. Sure, I could be playing with the kids - but what if I came up with cancer or something, then what am I doing for my Family affairs are marked "hers," just as business is marked "his." Priscilla gets an allowance of $750 a month, which covers the mortgage payment ($107), the utilities ($70) and home maintenance and repairs ($46) as well as food ($215), clothing ($81) and entertainment ($58). What's left usually goes into the family savings account, although Priscilla sometimes takes a flier in business herself. She owns a gasoline truck in her own name - and rents it to Heart of Texas Trucking Co.

Barney's one extravagance is antique collecting; he has a closet full of Dresden and Meissen china and the walls are sprinkled with Currier & Ives prints. Both enjoy travel, but since Barney doesn't like to be away from the office for more than three or four days, their trips are limited to short hops to Mexico or New Orleans. Most of their leisure is spent at the ranch.

Barney has extensive plans for the ranch. For one thing, he hopes to initiate an "assembly line" steer-feeding system, under which cattlemen would send him steers to be fed and then pay him a fee for the weight they have gained. He also plans to begin raising sheep. And his companies are not marking time, either.

"Maybe I'll make five million or 10 million, I don't know," Barney says. "Whatever it is, money is just a by-product. I'm having fun in what I'm doing - the way other people play bridge. Opportunity is still very much alive in this country. I've gota lot of hope for the future."

Priscilla also has hope for the future. "I'd like to build a new house and have more things and live with a little more dash and give better parties and do more things socially," she says. "I want the children to have the finest education possible and get a good start in life. But I won't push Barney to get any of these things."

Barney, of course, is a man who needs no pushing. Plans already are in motion for the house: the Hollands own a two-acre tract on a bluff overlooking the Trinity River. The Hollands will build their Early American dream house after the children get a little older and after they sell their present home -- "at a profit, of course."

The Hollands speak of tomorrow as though it were already here - as well it might be. Barney's optimism has never let him down before, and he sees not a chance that it will in the future. In his view, the boom will go snowhalling on and on, and he is willing to back up his belief with dollars and cents. He and his kind of new millionaire have cashed in most on postwar prosperity. They also are among those who made it possible.

How to live on a low income: NEXT WEEK: How to use on a star.

BARNEY RELAXES in boots and jeans on ranch, mulls over upcoming deals and family's future. He sees only prosperity - and a better life for the Holland family.

ONE GIRL'S PROBLEM: Watch TV or go out on a date?

Advice to Teenagers

About half of the letters 1 receive from readers request personal answers. This is impossible, but I will reply to as many as I can in this column.

Q. I am a boy of 17, a senior in high school. My problem is this: My parents are so oldfashioned that they make me stay at home every night of the week. My mother says I may start seeing girls when I reach 25.-K. L. Middlesboro, Ky.

A. Your parents are not being realistic. It is perfectly normal for a boy of 17 to want to date, and parents who try to stop this natural process usually find that their children deceive them in the matter. Perhaps some older member of your family, your clergyman or teacher could talk to your parents tactfully about it.

Q. I am 14 and I like boys, but I like TV, too. I do not know whether to go out on dates or watch TV. - M. M., Knaxville, Tenn.

A. While there is any doubt about it, better watch TV.

Q. There is a boy in my community who continually asks to date me, even though I refuse him each time. He is a nice boy, and I wouldn't want to lose him as a friend by hurting his feelings. How can I make him understand? Also, my face turns red when anyone tells me I'm pretty. Please tell me how to overcome this shyness. - C. 5., Greenville, S. C.

A. It is always a girl's privilege to refuse to go out with a boy, and she need not make elaborate excuses. Perhaps you are not really being firm enough with this boy, since you are worried about losing him as a friend.

Perhaps if you accept the fact that you are pretty and attractive, you will also accept the compliments that go with it. Express your thanks modestly and try to return the compliment at a suitable moment.

Q. I like a bay who likes me but we live quite a distance from each other. Could I ask him to write? - B. J. C., Syracuse, N. Y.

A. Yes, you may ask him to write, and it would be polite of him to say that he will even if he knows in his heart that he may never get around to it. If he's honest, you may get this kind of answer: "I'd like to write and I'll try. But you know how it is - there's homework and sports. But if you don't hear, it won't be because I'm not thinking of you."

Q. There is a boy of 17 here who is very conceited. All hé does is talk about himself. Is there any way to break up his conversation? - A. B., Medford, Mass.

A. Often, the boy who acts this way is secretly concerned about himself. He may think he's too short or too tall, too homely or too slow to compete on a normal level with other boys. Give him what approval you can for the things he does well and perhaps it will help him to overcome this fault.

Q. I am soon to be 14. My mother and father will not let me run in the streets till all hours of the night like the rest of the kids, and they make fun of me because of that. In fact, if I do anything my friends don't like, they tall me about it or give me the impression I am not wanted. - S. D., Muncy, Pa.

A. Very often the girl or boy who is teased? a lot, somehow needs the teasing and does things to incite it. See if that isn't so in your case. And try not to be too sensitive. Some people know that they should not be sharply critical of others, but at your age it's natural to speak out when their contemporaries do something that they don't approve of. You're probably the same way.

In any case, I can sense from your letter that you are not really displeased that your parents won't let you run in the streets until all hours of the night.

Power in a Pretty Package

By Tedd Thomey

A ROUND THE COURTS they refer to her as the atomic cannon of world tennis.

Sometimes she whacks the ball so hard the spectators stand back in alarm, half expecting to see a nuclear mushroom cloud rise from the devastated spot where that white blur just hit.

Long Beach's Beverly Baker Fleitz knocks the wool from a tennis ball with such case you'd expect her to be six feet tall and weigh 185 pounds.

You'd expect her to have arm muscles like Rocky Marciano and the bulgy thighs of Crazy Legs Hirsch.

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Mrs. Beverly Baker Fleitz is not only the most powerful feminine tennis player in the world today — she's also the prettiest. Beverly's figure is so perfect she turns half the starlets in Hollywood chartrense with envy.

SHE IS SMALL (only 5 feet 4 inches tall) and weights 117 pounds. She has the measurements of a Miss Universe candidate (31, 24, 35, reading from top to bottom), and when she sashays onto a court in one of her 25 fancy tennis frocks that sudden sound you hear in the spectators' section is not necessarily applause.

. It may well be the increased pressure of a thousand male heartbeats.

THE KEY WEAKNESS of most tennis players is in their backhand.

Mrs. Fleitz has no such weakness because she has no backhand. She has two of the biggest, strongest forchands in world tennis. This makes her absolutely unique among the world's top feminine players.

When she wants to hit a ball on her left (the backhand) side, she merely shifts the racket easily to her left hand—and, whammo! she scores another acc.

She is so versatile, however, that she can, when necessary, play a legitimate backhand. She often uses a backhand when making quick, hard volleys at the net, executing the stroke with the racket in her right hand.

MRS. FLEITZ has been playing tennis ambidextrously ever since she first picked up a racket at Santa Monlea's Lincoln Park public courts. That was when she was a child of 11 and was coached by her father, Frank Baker, a Santa Monlea recreation official.

Now 25 years old, she has in the intervening 14 years compiled this remarkable record:

1. She was runner-up in this year's Wimbledon, England, tournament, losing to Louise Brough in a tremendously hard fought, 7-5, 8-6 final that tennis experts said was one of the finest women's matches ever played on the famed center court. As a result she is ranked the No. 2 feminine tennis player in the world since the Wimbledon tournament is the "world series" of tennis, outranking even the U. S. Nationals.

2. She has won hundreds of trophies in state, national and international tournaments. She has enough trophies, gold, silver and bronze, to fill several rooms.

3. She was a member of the victorious U. S. Wightman Team of 1949, coming from far behind to whip her English opponent. (The Wightman competition is the feminine counterpart of the Davis Cup competition for men.)

4. In 1946, when she was a pert 16-year-old, she won the U. S. National Public Parks women's championship.

5. The next year, when she was an even perter 17, she scored a terrific upset, winning the women's championship of the Pacific Southwest tournament in Los Angeles. She bowled over Pat Canning Todd 6-2, 6-3 in a tournament which annually is considered as Important as the U.S. Nationals at Forest Hills. She won this championship for a second time last month, scoring a vengeful 6-1, 6-4 victory over Barbara Breit, a North Hollywood miss who upset Beverly at Forest Hills in August.

6. Last year at La Jolla she trounced Maureen Connolly, 6-3, 6-0, outpowering the powerful Little Mo in all departments. It was one of the worst beatings Miss Connolly ever suffered. (Little Mo, then the No. 1 world player, retired from competition shortly thereafter due to a leg injury. The two have not played since.)

THE LIST of Beverly's achievements goes on and on. In addition to winning countless state and sectional tournaments, she has won the women's championships of Germany, Ireland and Mexico (the latter twice). She has won all kinds of titles in women's doubles and in mixed doubles with her tall, handsome husband. In 1950, at Monte Carlo, she won the title of the "best junior tennis player in all of Europe."

When a tennis star marries, her career usually goes into a decline. But it has been just the opposite with Beverly. In 1951 she married John Fleitz (former Long Beach City College tennis

Going to "hit the road" at night? Then wash your face in cold water before you start, it's a trick that will help to "hypo" your night vision.

By Douglas Nelson Rhodes

A NEWLY-DISCOVERED way to stimulate better night vision is to wash your face and hands thoroughly in cold water before venturing forth into the This is the advice of Edwin D. Fletcher, special examiner in charge of research for the

California State Drivers' License Division, whose research showed that the cold water treatment may thereby materially improve your nighttime safe driving rec-

Fletcher and the Drivers' License Division recently conducted experiments in the hope of turning up some solution to the west's ever-climbing accident rate, especially among night drivers in California. The survey showed that nearly 2,500,-000 of the state's nearly 6,500 --000 motorists suffer from subnormal nocturnal vision, which includes poor glare resistanceanother driving hazard that may be ameliorated to an extent by following the cold water treatment.

The researchers do not claim that washing in cold water will automatically give owl-eyes to motorists, however. They suggest that it is merely one of the tricks which science has discovered to "hypo" the senses in the human system after the eyesight has become acclimated to the brighter hours of daylight. The treatment was developed while scientists were delving into the problems of overcoming headlight glare. It is admitted, though, that the surface has barely been scratched in this phase of optical research. periments are being continued along the lines indicated by the initial successes.

AFTER A STATEWIDE series of visual tests made on California drivers examiner Fletcher found that 10 per cent of those examined-and who have 20-20 vision (accepted as perfect in daylight—had subnormal sight ability after twilight. His findings are being used in a campaign to make California the first state to require rigid night driving examinations as a standard qualification for drivers' li-

What accounts for efficient and inefficient night vision?

Scientists explain it is a matter of how much "visual purple" the human system can manufacwithin a given period. Visual purple is a chemical pigment in the optic organ which allows the eye to see the image which light brings to it from the outside. Owls and other birds and animals with high reputations for nocturnal vision have an abundance of this pigment and their systems are geared naturally to the manufacture in quantity. Expesure of the eye to light, however, uses up or bleaches the pigment with varying degrees of rapidity, depending upon the species of animals. In human beings the bleaching is a relatively fast process.

VISUAL PURPLE is found in the retina, the eye's sensitive covering. The retina has two kinds of cells, called "rods" and "cones." Cones are in the center of the retina and rods are on the edge. Both cones and rods function in daylight but rods are less sensitive to light. They do their best work at night and are often spoken of as "night eyes,"

Primary cause of many motor accidents after dark, Fletcher found, is difficulty of the eyes to adjust from daylight to darkness within the short span of the twilight period. Adjustment of the eyes from light to dark is slower than the adaptation from dark to light. Therefore, though driver's vision normally compensates itself fairly quickly to overcome discomfort of sudden bright lights coming out of darkness—such as a pair of head-lights on the road ahead—the following few seconds are crucial ones from the vision standpoint. The eyes must, in turn, accustom themselves to the dark again, and this reverse process takes much longer. Research discloses that the half minute or so following the passing of two brightly lighted ears is the period of greatest danger because rods in the retina are temporarily insensitive until such time as the chemical processes of the drivers' systems replenishes the visual purple supply.

FLETCHER, who has been studying nocturnal vision problems for more than a decade and who has examined thousands of drivers, offers these tips to night drivers:

- (1). Wash your face and hands for several minutes in cold water before undertaking a motor trip.
- (2). Breathe deeply and flex your muscles at regular intervals to increase stimulation of other senses,
- (3). Use your car's sun visor to deflect gleam of oncoming headlights.
- (4). When glare strikes, adopt the trick which exprienced truck drivers use-that of looking intently at the right side of the road after first taking a quick look into the darkness ahead.
- (5). If you are on a highway equipped with a painted center line use the line as you would sight along a straight edge or ruler and drive parallel to it.
- (6). Wear sun glasses during the brightest part of the day to slow down the bleaching process of your visual purple.

Wheelchair Explorer

By Nelson Douglas

BERT KOPPERI, 37-year-old Sherman Oaks professional photographer, gets to more unusual places and manages to have a more adventurous life in a wheelchair than most people who move about in more normal fashion.

Paralyzed from the waist down and with only 30 per cent use of his arms, the indomitable Kopperi nevertheless has taken himself and his specially outfitted wheelchair, with camera attached, into many remote places on the globe — and carned his own way each time.

In Egypt, his was the first wheelchair ever to be mounted on a camel's back.

"THEY SAID it was no use to try, that the camel would never stand for such indignity," Kopperi recalls. "But I'm a guy who has learned that anything even a cantankerous camel-can be underestimated as to ability and willingness to adapt to new conditions. Well, that mangy old humpback never gave me a bit of trouble. I'll bet he's still bragging to the other camels about him being the only wheel-chair taxi in Egypti"

Kopperi is familiar with the ways of animals. One of his professional specialties is the photographing of hard-to-get subjects such as insects, dogs, cats, horses and other fauna.

Unusual camera angles of scenery and candid news shots are all in the day's work for him. When he wants photos of bees at work, for instance, he puts on the necessary protective gear and moves in on them in his conveyance. He's the first wheelchair photographer to be accredited to work in movie studios.

The star relaxes with her husband, John, now ranked 12th among tennis stars in Southland men's division.

POWER IN A PRETTY PACKAGE

Since her marriage, Beverly has played more powerful tennis than ever before. The nation's sportswriters love her."

She puts her family responsibilities first, refusing to make the glamorous rounds of the various national tennis circuits in order to remain at home and give her daughter a proper upbringing. When she can spare an hour or so from her housewifely duties she slips out to the Lakewood Tennis Club, keeping in trim by playing some of the city's top male players. (She beats most of them, too.)

THIS YEAR, photogenic Beverly has received more national publicity than ever before in her life. Thanks to her terrific play at Wimbledon, she was the darling of the tournament and sportswriters sent millions of words about her to the far corners of the world. She has been photographed from every conceivable angle in black and white and color, and her smile (it could be an advertisement for toothpaste) has graced the pages of seads of national magazines.

She was interviewed on network television by Jack Kramer during the recent Davis Cup matches. She has become such a celebrity in the tennis world that teenogers write to tennis magazines and ask: "Sirs, do you think it would help my game if I used both hands the way Beverly Baker Fleitz does?"

erly Baker Fleitz does?"

WHAT HAS BEEN her greatest thrill so far in tennis?

She doesn't have to think twice before answering.

"The Wightman matches at Philadelphia in '49," she recalls quickly. "It wasn't just that I had to overcome deficits of 2-5, 2-5 to win my match against an English girl. The real thrill was the fact that each point I won was annoureed over the loud-speaker as 'a point for the United States."

Her plans for the future?

"I haven't any," she says. "I always let the future take care of itself."

You can be sure, however, that little Mrs. Power-Flytes (a nick-name she's picked up on the courts) won't be satisfied until she's had another go at Wimbledon and the U.S. Nationals.

And, judging by past performance, you can be certain she'll win one or Lath titles before long.

By Helen Johnson

MOST BABIES are cunning. regardless of color. The average person adores them. Their sweet, innocent ways, dimpled bodies and eager little faces appeal to both sexes.

But 'way back in the late 1700s when the beautiful and glamorous Eulalia de Fages "reigned" in her humble adobe but as the first First Lady of California, a tiny, wrinkled baby lived. He was neither beautiful, innocent nor dimpled. In fact, he was ugly. So ugly that most people - and even horses and mules — ran at the sight of him. His name was Rather a peculiar name for a baby. But it suited this one to perfection. For Chici was a monkey! A pet Capuchin mon-key owned by Eulalia's lady in walting, Dona Augustias Mo-

There have been many pet monkeys down the years that followed Chici's life on earth, but rarely, if ever, one like Chici. His emotions ranked superior, as did his understanding. It is natural for any pet monkey to "give" his whole love to his master or mistress. Imagine then, the extent of Chici's unlimited contribution! True to his ancestry in another thing, he remained a "baby" for five or six years, and demanded the "mothering" only a person like Dona Augustias could give. For she was as different from the average person of her day as Chici was from the rest of his "tribe." Although Dona Augustias was a spinster, the motherly love she lavished upon the grimacing Chici was almost divine. She was a tall, thin female with squeaky Joints and a "dignified" mustachio — like a real grenadier. Chici was a joy in her childless life.

THE LONG JOURNEY from Mexico to California's capital, when the governor's wife and her lady in waiting came to Monterey, proved a hard one on Baby But he lived through it. The first lady despised him and resented his presence in the governor's "mansion." But the Dona and Chici were inseparable. So Chici, like a spoiled child, usually had his way. Even sometimes to sleeping on Junior Pedro's bed.

The climate of Monterey, however, was taking its toll on the tropic-born Chici. He lost weight. He even whined and cried like a human baby. The wrinkled, grimacing baby was slowly dying. Dona Augustias sensed it. She grieved pathetically. She couldn't bear to see him die. So one day, in complete desperation, she appealed to the dignified Governor Fages to have him sent back to the tropics.

It so happened that Conde de La Perouse, a Frenchman on a world trip, made 'a brief stopover in Monterey. Out of pity for the distraught Dona Augustias, he consented to take Chici back to his earlier haunts. The parting between the baby monkey and his mistress was so pathetic that even the stern governor and his beautiful lady felt

History does not record how long Chici lived after his separation from Dona Augustias, But it does say the sailors had great sport with California's ugliest baby before they left him in the tropics to shift for himself and

By Ted McKenna

A PRIVATE PLANE designed to operate off land or water—or be driven like an ordinary automobile—is being built in San Diego by a World War II Marine flier who was the first man to test the Navy's vertical takeoff plane in flight.

He is J. F. (Skeets) Coleman and he has incorporated some of the features of the vertical takeoff plane in the new combination auto-plane.

Called the Aeromarine, the new craft has a delta wing of 43 degrees sweepback. Coleman became familiar with the delta wing's advantages as engineering test pilot for Convair's division of General Dynamics Corp., assigned to the vertical takeoff fighter, designated by the Navy XFY-1, but better known as the Pogo.

IN NOVEMBER, 1951. Coleman became the first human being to make a transitional flight from vertical takeoff to level flight and back down to a vertical "tail-sitting" landing in the Pogo. He was chosen the outstanding aviator of the year and awarded the 1955 Harmon International Trophy.

A 215-horsepower Franklin engine driving a pusher propeller mounted above the wing, aft of the cabin, will power the Aeromarine. It will have a range of 800 miles on 80 gallons of fuel and a top speed of 225 miles an hour.

Coleman says the 2,500-pound plane will be able to lift itself off after a run of only 800 feet. Landing speed will be 57 miles an hour.

WINGSPAN of the Aeromarine will be 25 feet and overall length 18 feet. For operation as an automobile, the wing will fold twice on each side, near the fuselage and just inboard of the twin vertical fins. As a car the width will be 65 inches.

"The primary consideration in the Aeromarine was to design a good airplane that could operate off land or water," Coleman says, "Adapting the plane to operation as a medium performance car was secondary. We were satisfield with a 50-mile-an-hour top speed on land because anything more might have interferred with its performance as a plane,"

WATER LANDINGS and takeoffs will be made on a single, free-floating hydro-ski mounted underneath the plane's watertight hull, Coleman says. The ski, like the landing gear, will be fully retractable.

The plane was designed for extreme simplicity of operation in the air, since no good private airplane can be expected to survive if it is too complicated for the ordinary pilot to fly.

BECAUSE of the delta wing, the Aeromarine also will have exceptional structural strength for a light airplane. Coleman says the wing is inherently stronger than other types, and folding is expected to be no problem.

The engine cooling fan and exhaust will combine in a closed system to suck air off the leading edge of the wing for high lift on takcoff and landing.

Coleman says he expects wide acceptance of the plane by industrial firms looking for a versatile executive aircraft. "We plan to concentrate on this market first," he said, "but the Aeromarine will appeal also to the weekend 'pilot who flies for pleasure or sport."

APPROXIMATELY 92,000 tourists visited the Hawalian Islands in 1954 - and 41 per cent of them were from California, says the Hawaii Visitors Bureau.

carry on at newer, bigger and better quarters. The old Union Pacific horseshoe courts were located at Ocean Blvd. and Lime Ave., but progress ousted them and an enterprising restaurant took over. The time goes back to 1927 when the lot, owned by the Union Pacific Railway, was loaned with-out cost to a local group of horseshoe pitchers. Here the familiar stakes of the horseshoe court popped up without embellishment of backstops, cement pitching stands or bleachers.

Early-day players recall that a shoe that missed the stake might well roll half a block., Winter rains quagmired the courts but left spirits undaunted; following a rain the club members would spend two or three hours digging out the soft mud from in front of the stakes and replacing it with dry dirt dug from solid earth behind the courts. Without pause the boys then settled down to the business at handhorseshoes.

DURING THIS PERIOD as many as eight members participated in club activities, despite an earth-shaking raise in club dues from 50 cents to a dollar in the heart of the depression, the Union Pacific Horseshoe Club continued to grow.

Abou 1936 the railway leased the land to the present holders. but allowed the club to move to railway property on the south-east corner of Broadway and Alamitos Ave. Here the club flourished until 1940 when, again it was "dispossessed" by the construction of a store at this corner. However, again, the Union Pacific, like the Great White Father shepherding its charges from reservation to reservation (though under no legal compellation) allowed the club to move to its present spot at First St. and Alamitos. Here it has remained in uninterrupted freerent tenure to this day and cur-rently boasts about 125 duespaying members and eight of the best pitching courts in Southern California.

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the original club-Peter Cartwright, George Pasch and George Weihrauch — still remain active in club pitching. Ten and 15-year "veterans" of club competition abound on the roster. Winter visitors from the east swell membership rolls and enliven activities with yearly renewals of old friendships. One Montana rancher, George Bond, has been a winter member of the club continuously for 25 years. Pasch reflects that so many of the club members seemed to be named "George" that when someone says, "Let George do It," half the members of the club get up and leave.

Club members come from all walks of life. The present roster includes a banker, a lawyer, businessmen, ranchers, landlords (and tenants) and many of Long Beach's famous retired element. In earlier days, a famous Chicago physician was a regular winter player. To this doctor is credited the quote that he had never heard of an active horseshoe player having had an operation for appendicitis. The continual bending over to pick up the shoes is given as the apparent reason for this. As one club member was heard to remark facetiously recently, "I may keel over from the sun here one of these days, but it's a comfort knowing I'm safe from appendi-

THE CLUB'S 1955 president and current nationally ranked player, Jim Weeks of Norwalk, encourages newcomers to the club, as do all the members. The atmosphere is always cheerful and the advice given on the techniques and art of playing horseshoes has no peer for clean, inexpensive fun and activity.

And, in the friendly surroundings of the Union Pacific Horseshoe Club, prospective players can be assured that they will feel as relaxed and comfortable as an old shoe while learning horseshoes.

Original club members include: (back l.) George Pasch, (r.) Sherman Hyatt and (front l.) George Weihrauch and (r.) Peter Cartwright. Note shoe coming up, mid-air.

A gold-trimmed typewriter, cash and a sea-cruise vacation are among prizes won by David Baker for essays. Literature came to him last year. By that time David had proved the adage that "Words are the tools of wisdom" and can earn their way when used with sagacity in conjunction with a fine, local library.

A 27-day vacation trip aboard a coast freighter was made possible by writing the winning 850 words about the U. S. Merchant Marine. Included was a prize of $50, with an extra $25 for spending money during his trip up the coast, touching Port Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver and San Francisco. There were 28 contestants from all over the U. S. A.

Essay prizes, of course, are not the only rewards in competition. All the careful research David found necessary is an education. The trophies, war bonds and the solid cash have given him a practical answer to what an education can yield, now and in the future.

yen to try for the prizes in a contest? Especially an essay, contest with a topic like "What America Means to Me," in which one could put some good, positive convictions?

That is how David Ridenour Baker of 2126 E. 63rd St. figured when he began writing essays in the student contests. He was hardly 15 years old when he won a war bond in his first contest, which a local club sponsored.

Now turned 17, David has banked his seventh prize. This he won in a recent national contest, held by a typewriter company. More than 16,000 entered in the senior division. The $200 prize and the gold-trimmed typewriter he earned has pretty well convinced David that he will go on writing.

In the two short years that he has been writing essays, David won the sweepstakes prize for an essay on "What the Long Beach Shipyard Means to My Community." Several hundred students tried, but it was David who pocketed the $500 first award, plus a $50 school award.

Little Diamond-in-the-Rough

HECAUSE well located lots in Long Beach are getting scarce it behooves the prospective landowner to scrutinize closely any and every piece of land available. The possibilities inherent in many are not always obvious at first glance.

The lot that Mr. and Mrs. Vern W. Bengtson bought two years ago at 311 Roycroft was just such a diamond-in-the-rough. Situated in a good residential area, the lot nevertheless dampened the ardor of many real estate shoppers with a be-wildering tangle of weeds and rampant growth, and a small house in general "down-at-the-heels" appearance.

IT WASN'T just exactly the Bengtsons' idea of a dream site, either, but a little speculation on what could be done with a little BECAUSE well located lots in Less wildlife and a little more house intrigued them. So they plunged.

And for the past two years they lived in the little house which they enlarged and "enriched" to dollhouse specifications.

Only recently the family moved into a large and modern house they built on the front of the lot. But today's story is about the little house and how it "came into its own."

Two years ago it was one of the saddest small dwellings in town. Its modest 12x21-foot proportions were literally enguifed with eaves-high weeds that grew up and around years and years of accumulated rubbish banked up in back of the house.

Just as soon as the ink was dry on the deed to the property, the Bengtsons hauled a way seven loads of junk to clear their new lot. Among other things, the chopping down of weeds and wild bushes revealed several trunks filled with jars and bottles—all empty—plus an old bathtub long since retired.

HOW THAT all this could accumulate on a lot in this choice location was a mystery, but the

Bengtsons never lost sight of the fact that their toil was worth while and would pay off.

As is the case with most old and neglected dwellings, the kitchen was an absolute horror. Laundry tubs of rough gray coment sufficed for everything from dishwashing to the Monday morning laundry. An antiquated cooler was trying to do refrigeration duties—not too successfully. And there was scarcely enough space for one person to move about in the rooms.

The bathroom was smaller still. A comical old bathtub stood on its ball-and-claw feet with an old hot water heater that hung precariously above it. There was no lavatory.

All in all, it was with the barest minimum that Bengtson began the job of remodeling.

He added a 14x24-foot living and bedroom area. He paneled the interior with beautifully waxed knotty pine. A heavy supporting beam now spans the structure between the old and the new addition and over it handsome varnished rafters rise to meet at a height that adds an amazing feeling of spaciousness.

The floor is finished with asphalt tile, glossy and wonderfully practical. Large and airy windows have taken the place of the homely apertures Bengtson tore out. To the right of the front door, jalousy—or louver—windows add a modern feeling and efficiently usher in breezes to the kitchen area adjacent.

DHECTLY OPPOSITE the front door is the pretty little kitchen that sets itself off from this point and from the living room by means of a curved serving bar of used brick topped with a gleaming birch counter.

Being one with the entry area and with the newly added and spacious living room the kitchen no longer seems "boxed in" and stuffy. And its modern innovations might well vie with any up-to-date preparation area, regardless of size,

Pale green vinyl tops the cabinet counters and surfaces the floor. The beautifully crafted birch cabinets are fitted with copper hardware that adds the right provincial touch to go with the mustard, brown and white medallion wallpaper. A clever hood, fashioned of scalloped birch, accommodates a ceiling fan that efficiently ventilates this open kitchen.

The pretty living room achieves much of its coziness and "farmhouse hospitality" through its proximity to the scenic little kitchen. Also greatly responsible for its abundant charm is the way its windows swing out to a yard which is densely endowed with established old trees that the house seems completely set apart from its neighbors.

Deep green draperies dress the living room windows before which stands a floral-printed sofa. Flanking the sofa are two pine step tables with dropleaf extensions painstakingly made by Bengtson. A small round dropleaf cocktail table stands in front of the sofa, still another example of his provess as a furniture creator.

A DUTCH DOOR opens to the small bedroom made more spacious with the inclusion of storage trays built into the wall. Bengtson installed 10 drawers next to a wardrobe to eliminate space-consuming chest and dresser case pieces.

The pine paneling in the bedroom has been water-stained a pale green. Yellow cottage curtains hang at the boy window and complement the maple fourposter bed. A high, exposedbeam ceiling gives a feeling of airiness to the room.

The redecorated bathroom has more footage and considerably more appeal than its forerunner. Black-and-white "doodles" cartoon wallpaper in combination with bright yellow floor and pullman cabinet add new charm. Outside, a spacious dressing room fitted with ceiling-high storage units is a luxury unknown to the former house.

The cottage's board and batten exterior siding is stained a sage green that contrasts nicely with the buttery-yellow trim. A red brick pathway leading to the front door expands generously at the side to provide a secluded and sun-bathed patio.

Art Gallery of a Globetrotter

By Ellen Saunders i

ARE INDEED is the modern traveler who fails to show pictures to his stay-at-home friends. Albert Floreani, 125 S. Golden Ave., is no exception. Only his pictures are not the usual amateur color slides but the latest additions to his miniature art gallery, which contains hundreds of steel engravings, rare feather etchings, water colors and lithographic reproductions of some of the world's greatest paintings,

Building an art gallery has been Floreani's hobby ever since he left the ancient Swiss town of Solothurn as a restless 16year-old to begin the 40-year career as a tourist guide and court interpreter which was to take him from the plains of Patagonia to the banks of the Nile, and twice around the world.

A RELIGIOUS MOTIF is predominant among his lithographs which are representative of all the great schools of painting and include the works of Van Gogh, Rubens, Rembrandt, Whistler, and Sir Joshua Reynolds. Among them is Fra Filippo Lippi's famous 14th Century portrayal in color of the "Birth of Christ,"

The religious motif reappears in 12 Japanese water colors which depict that country's version of the Nativity. And in a 21x30-inch steel engraving. "The Crucifixion," a 19th Century French artist's dramatic portrayal of Christ on the cross.

In sharp contrast to the som-ber shadings of "The Crucifix-ion" are the brilliant reds and yellows predominant in 100 reproductions of famous American Indian chiefs resplendent in their ceremonial robes.

FLOREANI HAS 200 steel engravings, each an autographed portrait of such famous 18th and 19th Century personalities as Longfellow, Thackeray, Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Jefferson, Franklin and Florence Nightin-

Ten 130-year-old feather etchings of the Hudson River, examples of a lost art which flourished prior to Civil War days, are probably the most valuable pieces In Floreani's collection.

Aside from a few hundred colored postcards which reflect the beauty of the Alps both in summer and in winter, 20th Century art is represented only by two items. Yet these are among the most prized in Floreani's collection. One is a little known lithograph of Thomas Edison and Charles Steinmetz working to-

knock on your front door on Halloween night, and five or six small figures dressed in fancy costumes pipe up, "Trick or treat!"? Do you give them a tasty handout accompanied by a big smile? Or do you refuse to answer the door because you think trick or treating is foolish nonsense?

Let's look at Halloween through the eyes of a youngster. So many wonderful things happen all at once: You put on a clever or funny or pretty or scary coslume; you get to stay up late and go out on the mysterious dark street and knock on people's doors; you say the magic words, "Trick or treat!" and most people give you some candy or cookles or other goodies; you go to lots of houses and get lots of treats; then you take your big bag of loot home and spread it all out on the kitchen table to see how much you got. Mother allows you to eat some of everything, then suggests that you save the rest for tomorrow and the day after. You finally go to bed tired and very happy. It's been a wonderful, exciting evening.

With very little effort and a lot of good spirit, grownups, too, can enjoy Halloween. Those who pull down the shades, put out the front room lights, and then hide in a back bedroom during the trick-or-treat hours, are themselves missing a big treat. There are some people who actually leave their homes for a few hours in order not to be bothered with small ghosts and witches at the door. It's very fortunate that these people are in the minority.

SOME PARENTS whose children have long since grown and left home often resent Halloween and say, "Why should I be bothered?" Perhaps these people are old long before their time, or maybe they've just forgotten what it's like to be young. If they would participate with the youngsters, Halloween would be a circus for all concerned. With more time on their hands than busy young mothers, they could prepare fancy treats that would mark their home as a favorite Halloween landmark.

Actually, the business of trick or treating helps discourage vandalism or minor mischievous pranks. When a group of young teenagers decides to trick-or-treat, they are out for innocent fun. A warm welcome and a small snack will send them happily on their way to the next house. A cold brushoff or a darkened house obviously occupied by unhospitable adults quite logically makes the youngsters hostile and prankish. It encourages a "get-even" attitude which may or may not have serious consequences. With the very small children it brings only nurt,

CHILDREN ARE so easy to please. Halloween treats can be plain or fancy. It's a good idea (and one appreciated by careful mothers) not to give loose popcorn or a handful of unwrapped candy. Here are a few treat suggestions:

A large orange lollypop tied with a ribbon,

A cupcake frosted with orange icing and a raisin face.

A simple sugar cookie frosted like a cupcake.

If a little more time is available, fancier treats like these will receive a big "Gee, thanks!":

A "necklace" for each child made of peanuts in the shell. (String the peanuts with a long needle and stout thread.)

A homemade popearn ball wrapped in an orange paper napkin and tied with a black ribbon.

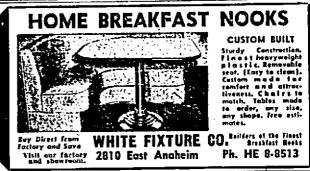

An apple man with a marshmallow head and toothpick legs.

A SMALL ORANGE with a face made with raisins for eyes, red gumdrops for nose, jelly bean for mouth and marshmallow for hat — all stuck on with toothnick halves.

The total cost of some of these treats can be as little as 50 cents. A small survey in a local neighborhood revealed that an average of about 30 children knock on a door in an evening. This may vary as much as a dozen each way. It would probably take less than an hour's time to fix a large tray of individually wrapped treats for the young visitars.

It's really no trick to be a happy treater, and it's a sure way to feel young in spirit for one big evening of the year!

The Foul and the Unspeakable

THIS IS NO sleepy-time-downsouth, nor is It a novel for the tender reader. Everything that is foul, beastly, unspeakable is spoken of here. But it speaks with such a voice as is seldom heard in fiction. "Andersonville" by MacKinlay Kantor (World, $5) is the Book of the Month Club selection for November, and the novel will be off to a jet-impelled start toward the top of the best-seller lists.

Every author, every novelist probably has one blg one in him, and if they come any bigger than this, Kantor just has two heads. Any time a reader can continue through 760 pages of almost entirely unrelieved frightfulness, horror, brutality and suffering, minus the busty heroine and the daring hero standard to Civil War copy, he is reading a novel in upper case,

The story, if it can be so clarified and classified, begins in a pine forest in Georgia. Near it live the people of the South who are destined to be moved by the falling of the timber, the building of the stockade and the continuing presence within it of Yankee war prisoners. If it is possible to imagine the presence of 1,500 men to the square acre within that compound, the reader is off to a visit to the sights, sounds and smells that come with confinement. The swamp which becomes more and more filthy with the sorry wastes from the bodies of starving men; the deadline beyond which it was fatal to step; the thicking and murder that went on within the prison, all these and some extra horrors made up Andersonville. The fault was hard to identify with any one man or group of men -it was just an outgrowth of warfare, a hideous manifestation of what happens to man when he reverts to the animal. The reader will blame nobody, will sympathize with everybody, with even the unfortunate Henry Wirz who was hanged for the Andersonville horror after the

ROY ROGERS was born Leonard Franklin Slye in Cincinnati on Nov. 5, 1911. And about his coming into the world his mother has but one regret: "If I had to cry because he was so ugly, why did I ever have to tell anybody?" And then she adds, "Maybe that's one reason our boy always was so shy."

But shy or not, the "King of the Cowboys" has since been a shining light in the lives of his mother and father and children everywhere. The great turning point came after he was married to Dale Evans, "The Queen of the West," for with her help he found the miracle of faith.

The warm and glowing story of Roy's and Dale's lives, accent-ing their anchor of faith, is told by Elise Miller Davis in "The Answer Is God" (McGraw-Hill, $3.25). To get her story, Mrs. Miller lived with the Rogerses, traveled with them, until she had gong deep into their personal lives and accumulated a great wealth of material that came straight from their hearts — the stuff that will make "The Answer Is God" the best-seller it deserves to be .- F. DO SENIORITY, chance, and family influence play really important roles in the final selection of a top executive? That question is answered in "The Big Business Executive - the Factors That Made Him, 1900-1950" (Columbia University Press, $1). THE BAD AND BEAUTIFUL: A compilation, such as "The New Pocket Anthology of American Verse," edited by Oscar Williams (World, $3.50), that publishes 20 splendid poems by Robert Frost and many pages of Millay and Robinson, though 14 wasteful pages of Oscar Williams' rambling verses, vulgar pieces by Ezra Pound and prosy utterances of William Carlos Williams are included, is still a bargain. A NEW FILM is on the market here. It is Eastman Kodak's new Kodachrome film in 35-mm. and 828 sizes. The film, known as Type F, is color balanced for clear, wire-filled flashlamps without the use of a filter. It replaces Type A film, which was color balanced for use with standard photoflood lamps. This change to the Type F color balance stems from the fact that clear flash lamps such as the No. 5 and 25 (or Class M) are now the most popular sources of artificial light among amateur photographers. Thus the new Type F film will simplify color flash photography by eliminating the need for the color correcting fil-

Foliage to Scent Your Garden Scene

By Bob Gilmore

DLANTS with fragrant leaves will add a lot to your garden scene. Flowers such as stocks, narcissus, carnations and comparable subjects have won much fame for their rich perfume. Creating the same kind of an environment with foliage subjects will prove an interesting adventure for Long Beach area gardners.

One of the most delightful fragtances in the plant kingdom emanates from the leaves of the diosma, often called colconema

by nurserymen. This ornamental is more familiarly known as "breath of heaven" which is an apt description. Two varieties are available; alba, which produces white-toned flowers and purpurea which develops blooms of a purple-pink tinge. The plant has somewhat the appearance of. a heath and demands a spot out in the sun. Rubbing the leaves together causes the fragrance to be more pronounced.

For a clean fragrance that will remind you of the great outdoors choose libocedrus decurrens. This is a California native and as such is sure to succeed in your garden. It has what is known as a woodsy smell;" it is like bringing the mountains to your garden. This incense cedar is well adapted for the average landscape, being neither too large nor too small. At maturity the tree should approximate a height of from forty to fifty feet, LIBOCEDRUS DECURRENS is somewhat on the formal side and this characteristic should be kept in mind relative to its surroundings. The tree has a stately shape and is well proportioned. The foliage is dense, the tree being quite full in the center. It assumes a pyramidal type of growth. The aromatic quality should aid in wiping out gasoline fumes that may waft into your garden from the street.

A somewhat taller tree is eucalyptus citriodora; so named because of its lemon-like scent. This specimen grows to around seventy feet and gets there rather rapidly. One distinguishing mark of the eucalyptus citriodora is its white trunk that, because of the smoothness of the surface, appears to be polished. The leaves which are slender in shape have the exact pungency of a lemon.

Myrtus communis, the myrtle of Roman times and well known throughout the pages of history, is one of Southern California's most popular hedge plants; and deservedly so. The foliage is shiny in appearance and highly aromatic; the small white flowers give way in early spring to black berries.

FOR HEDGE PURPOSES you have a choice of two excellent myrtles: the common type is the large-growing specimen, going from four to eight feet. Variety compacta, which in late years become increasingly more popular, ranges from three to six feet. Both varieties are hardy down to fifteen degrees and tolerate a great deal of pruning.

SOLUTION TO TODAY'S PUZZLE (See Page 30.)

Many shrubs lend fragrance to the garden. Juniper is one, giving off fresh. pungent, "woodsy" smell

This allows you to shape the plant as you wish. These myrtles also perform well as specimen plants. They require very little ornamental. Housewives take their cooking, or seasoning, seriously are well acquainted with the magic powers of the leaves of a sage plant. It is a perennial and will continue on in your garden for many years. The blooms which appear in racemes are purple, blue and white.

Famed hybridizer of camellias, Koseku Sawada, Alabama nursery, pollinating

By Adria Allen Aldrich

Strangely

KOSEKU SAWADA is one of the world's famous bybridizers of the camellia and over his many years of work has developed 26 new varieties that have become internationally famous, A native of Osaka, Japan, he has spent almost 50 years in the United States, most of them at his 130-acre nursery in Mobile, Ala., where today his war veteran sons are carrying on in their father's footsteps and furnishing thousands of rare camellias to nurseries all over the country.

Romantically his work in this field began many years ago when his childhood sweetheart came on to be his bride and brought with her some camellia seeds in her dowry. The following year in 1917, Sawada brought in some fine white camellia scedlings and in 1930, Mrs. K. Sawada was the result of his first cross. Sadly, this plant first flowered just one year after his beloved wife had died of pneumonia and she never saw the flower. It is a small white, blushed with pink, extremely hardy and perfect for the cut flower trade.

FROM 1917 TO 1945 he grew 50,000 seedlings and they developed into the famous 26 new varicties, mostly Japonicas, but 11 are the Sasanqua type, which blooms earlier and is more hardy.

Strangely they are mostly whites, although he has not particularly bred for them.

In 1945 he began to work with highly controlled hand pollination and in 1951 he and Dr. Edward Lilly of Harvard treated their first seed with X-ray. So far none of the plants has shown any mutation of leaf and nothing startling has bloomed except a new very deep purple that flowered for the first time last winter and looks very promising.

Among the camellias that Sawada is famous for is K. Sawada, a pure white, very double giant of four to five inch diameter; Inura, a huge semi-double of porcelain white with yellow stamens showing; White Empress, an early bloomer of perfect form and large size and Frizzle White, a semi-double with crinkled petals intermingled with many vellow stamens.

WHITE GIANT is just what its name implies, and resembles n lotus flower; Victory White is a semi-double, peony type developed during the war-time; White

Queen is pure white with pointed tip petals in semi-double array; Queen Bessie is another semidouble with large waxy petals and many stamens, faintly plak around the center; White Hibis-cus has long pointed petals and Shiro-Botan is of a loose peony type of pure white with a unique "cup and saucer" form before opening fully.

IN THE SASANQUA varieties he recommands Dawn, one of the hardiest, a semi-double ivory white with flesh pink .nargins; Usa Beml a light pink with white variations, a semi-double of loose peony form, which is akin to the wild Snow - on - the - Mountain, a native of Japan. Hiodoshi has nine-inch petals variegated crimson and white in a moire design and Hiryonishiki is a semi-double with petals waved and chinkled in a beautiful cherry red blotched with white. Sawada received the Award of Honor in 1954 for his distinguished services. The award was made by the American Camellia

By Eleanor Avery Price

SOME BREEDS of dogs top all others in the majority of obedience trials and surveys show that one of these is the Border collie, a dog sie I dio mi seen in Southern California trials.

Those who have seen this superb working animal in a sheep dog trial, o be dience event or working for his master know that he not only is tops as good dogs go but that he goes "over the top" in his excellence.

Since the Border collie is seldom seen in Southern California, this fine breed has scarcely been noticed here. However, if you were to see one at a sheep dog trial, obedience trial, or working for his master, you would know that he not only is tops but that he actually goes over the ton!

NO DOG in the ring, field or ranch can beat a good Border collie, for he is a real working dog to the fullest extent of the

It is a wonderful sight at a sheep dog trial to watch this dog work at the job he is bred to do. At a whistle from his master he will drop in his tracks while running at full speed. Another whis-tle will start him, another send him to right or to left. Each little variation in the whistling is a different signal recognized and obeyed by the dog while he is working either at full speed or walk or crouch.

THE BORDER COLLIE is a beautiful animal, smaller and more compact than the regular collie, and his coat is usually black and white. He is not a new breed, for Thomas Bewick in his "General History of Quadrupeds" refers to him as far back as 1790.

The dog originated along the border between England and Scotland, hence his name. He is used extensively in Europe for

The breed is registered with the North American Sheep Dog Society, the only society in the United States which is officially recognized by the International Sheep Dog Society of Britain. Mutually acceptable rules govern the interrelationship between the two societies.

Credited with being the first person in California and perhaps in the United States to introduce the Border collie into the AKC obedience trials is Mrs. Frances McJunkin of Vallejo, with the dog, Wheat (pictured with this

TWO WEEKS after his first appearance in a training class, Wheat was in the ribbons at his first show. Four months and two weeks after his first show he won his utility degree at the age of one year and one week. The rules of AKC were then a little different, but when changed Wheat was the first doe on the West Coast to get a qualifying score under the new laws. Wheat never received a disqualifying score at any show.

The Border collie has appeared in Life magazine, and he was seen as Bob, Son of Battle, in the 20th Century-Fox film, "Thunder in the Valley."

NLESS YOU are going to play Maxim's on Friday night (when you have to dress) or the London night spots (mostly dress), cut the dress clothes out. For a week, I'd say one dark suit, two pairs of slacks and a jacket; light topcoat (at this time), hat, two pairs of shoes, couple pairs of nylon shorts, same on socks; pajamas and shaving gear, etc. No point in dacron shirts. You can carry enough that you don't have to wash your own shirts.

I carry a pair of skl socks and a small pocket flashlight on the plane. On these 15-hour overocean flights it's more comfortable in ski socks. But be sure you carry a little plastic shoehorn. It's rough to get shoes on in the morning if you've been sitting up. The flashlight is for wandering around the plane after dark.

The airlines always have an electric razor aboard so I don't bother about that. They also furnish the toothbrush and powder.

I try to go over lighter than this and pick up a Donegal tweed jacket during the hour refueling at Shannon Airport and Daks slacks at Simpson's-in-Piccadilly in London. Good way to add inexpensively to your wardrobe.

I almost forgot. Carry a light-Nobody gives away matches in Europe and since you aren't used to this, you usually run out.

The top Mexican hotels outside Mexico City run $3 to $5 a day for two. Dinners run about $1, Imported liquor is high but tequila is low and so is Mexican rum; the imported French wines are rarely worth it and the local product is pretty raw. The beer, however, is as good as Germany. I mean Bohemia, the best.

You might gauge a little better if I tell you that I figure $30-$35 a day driving in the States and using motor courts and this drops to the $20-$25 figure the minute I cross the border.

Be sure you get Mexican insurance at the border and don't drive at night and watch out for those truck drivers. Accidents are real trouble in Mexico. They are treated as a criminal and not a civil suit offense. I saw a cou-ple who had been under house arrest for a month and all they did was run into a tree without anybody anywhere around. was costing them plenty with lawyers and such stacked all over the place.

THE PRACTICE of nations to honor with special postage stamps the significant events of another country or an occasion of international interest is becoming more popular every year.

Earlier this year some 30 countries marked the 50th anniversary of the founding of Rotary International; in 1951, 3 it was the Marian Year; In 1919, the 75th anniversary of the Universal Postal Union; in 1945, the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and in 1937, the sesquicentennial of the United States Constitution,

On Oct. 21, postal officials all over the world will release at least 100 different stamps to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the United Nations.

The U. N. Postal Administration will start the parade with an issue that will be an innovation. Its three commemoratives will be issued in small souvenir sheets, each imprinted with a three, four and eight-cent stamp. These may be used as a unit and prepay 15 cents worth of postage, or they may be cut apart and used individually. It is the first time that the United Nations has produced such an issue.

Word has been received from several other countries that they would have special stamps. Switzerland, which is not a member, will produce a complete set of seven different values: Austria, which has applied for membership but has not yet been admitted, will Issue a single strikdesign. Luxembourg will produce four stamps designed by Sam Hartz, the man who created number of stamps for the

The important aspect of this recent trend, as far as collections are concerned, is that it enables them to make specialty collections in addition to their regular albums.

The acquisition of such "international event stamps" gives them an opportunity of arranging a small album with stamps, first-day covers and related annotations and owning at least one collection which is absolutely complete: the ambition of every follower of the philatelic avoca-

They See More

The trend toward increased visibility for sightseeing passengers on trains and busses has now extended to commercial aircraft for the first time.

Hawaiian Airlines announces its new Douglas Viewmaster planes, designed by AiResearch Aviation Service Co., a division of the Garrett Corp., will incor-porate four panoramic view windows almost five feet long and a foot and a half wide, two on each side of the aircraft. Such tinusually large windows in aireraft are a distinct departure from past concepts of airplane design. With eight additional foot-square windows as visibility features, these planes will give sightseers and especially camera enthusiasts, an entirely new look at the Hawaiian Islands.

JOHN OLGIN

Looks Are Deceiving
ERE'S A BIT of information that may shock the daylights out of John Olgin's many Long Beach friends.

Olgin is a grandfather. In fact, he has been a grandfather for three years.

The reason this is surprising is simply because Olgin, with his smooth tanned cheeks and sleek dark hair, looks like a boy of 24 or 25. Actually he is 44 years old and has been in the restaurant business for more years than he can remember.

For those who may not be aware of it, Olgin is the suave, efficient maitre d' hotel in the Wilton Hotel's Skyroom. When it comes to serving special dishes, he is perhaps one of the most dextrous operators on the local restaurant scene. He does tricks with two forks in the same hand that are quite magical.

Persons who want to enjoy a display of real culinary skill order the Skyroom's Medallion of Beef. This specially is prepared by Olgin right at the patron's table. The dish consists of de-lectable small filets of beef which Olgin sautes in wine over the brilliant flame of a copper chaf-ing dish. During his perform-ance, he is attended by several waiters who hand him key ingredients at crucial moments in the manner of assistants helping a great surgeon.

OTHER SKYROOM specialties which are tantalizingly palata-ble these days include Broiled Pepper Steak served in a cocotte; Veal Cutlet Bleu Gordon; Shish Kebab with scrumptious Rice Pilaff and Fried Chicken Grandmere. This latter item is actually a rather homey meal, grandmere being French for grandmother. The chicken-including corn fritters, biscuits and honey and all the other trim-mings of grandma's day—makes a hit with everyone.

Currently the Skyroom, with its incomparable views of the harbor and adjoining Southland areas, is all dolled up in a Hawalian motif. The featured orchestra is Danny Kuaana's Hawaiian band which puts on two excellent floor shows nightly at 10:30 and 12:30.

And now some vacationing mountain men, drawn by the sounds of battle, join the erowd...and one of them starts up the side of the building!

"FITZ!" the big man groans. "Air YEW on tother end o' this??"

"Thar's ben a turr'ble mistake, boys," Big Fallon hollers down. "We're fightin' th' wrong people!" He drops to the ground, the war begins, and Lance, Blaze, and Fitz pile out of their prison.

The mountain man considers himself a match for any ten men. This is something of an exaggeration, however, for presently the trappers are outnumbered only 5-to-1 and find themselves backed to the river.

Above the din of battle a voice shouts:
"We cain't swim this crik (the Mississippi),
'thar's snags an' bars out thar! Somebody rent us a boat!"

This is promptly done, at gunpoint.

FLUORISTAN IS FLUORIDE IN ITS MOST EFFECTIVE FORM-PREVENTS CAVITIES

Mirocle of the Towns Without Toothaches. For years, children growing up in several Western towns were virtually without tooth dreay. Then science learned why: nature's decay-preventive, fluoride, was present in their drinking water?

Prevents Most Cavities Where Toothbrush Can't Reach! Even between teeth, where food particles lodge (arrows), Crest gives the greatest protection ever known. Crest penetrates between teeth, strengthens enamel of entire tooth against decay.

Science Long Tried To Put Pluoride -only medically approved preventive of decay-in a toothpaste. But merely adding fluoride does not work. At last, university scientists and Procter & Gamble found the answer: Fluoristan, exclusive fluoride compound.

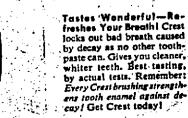

Never Before Such Decay Prevention! Crest has been proven in the most extensive and best-documented research ever conducted on a toothpaste. The record of decay prevention established by Crest has never been equalled by any other product. CARLOS CONTRACTOR DE LA CONTRACTOR DE LA
